The World's Silver.
Italy Finds Oil.
Strange British Hanging.
Mohammed's Pigeon.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

GEORGE E. ROBERTS, vice president of the National City Bank, says our business troubles are due to our great gold reserve. On our huge gold pile, dangerous inflation, reckless speculation and other evils were based. They hurt all nations, and hurt us most of all.

SOME BELIEVE, rightly, that the butchering of silver's value hurt the world more than the scramble for gold. Making silver practically worthless as money made half the people on earth, about eight hundred millions, unable to buy goods. China and India, with more than seven hundred million human beings, are without useful money.

Even high finance was made to understand the situation last week, when Mexico, with every desire to pay, was forced to suspend interest payments on five hundred millions of gold bonds. You cannot pay your debts if your creditors make payment impossible.

THE MEXICAN situation may cause the money power of the world to realize that demonitizing silver is dangerous. Small bank notes in France and Britain, as cheap as 8 cents each in France, drove silver from circulation. And our "cartwheels" are seen rarely. Britain attempted to put India on a gold basis when she was not really strong enough for a gold basis herself, and India's great hoards of silver, becoming less and less valuable, were marketed at ruinous prices.

GOLD AND SILVER have been used, side by side, as the world's money for thousands of years, with silver the dominant metal, the greater part of the time. The French word for money is argent, which means "silver," and today silver is practically worthless, a gold dollar being worth about 50 times its weight in silver.

Now, we consider lending China one hundred million ounces of silver, to help her finances. It would rid us of part of our useless silver, but would be, to China, about as useful as the loan of a trainload of Confederate money.

It would interest W. J. Bryan to look down and see to what the financiers' contempt for silver has led.

The world's "gold" governments might well call a conference to restore to silver its value, on a basis of 20 to 1 at most, with renewed and extensive coinage of the metal. The desire to "control money" will not be so keen, now that one-sided money means bankruptcy, with half the earth's people unable to buy from the gold hoarders.

ITALY HAS discovered oil, in encouraging quantities, at Fontevivo, near Parma. There is no great quantity, as yet, but the oil does gush from the ground, and in Italy today that means as much as four or five rainbows in the sky at once

Mussolini, most energetic and efficient of earth's rulers, with the possible exception of Stalin, organized the Azienda Generale Italiana Petrola to seek for oil and has found it 700 feet down.

Kingsbury, of California, Seubert, of Indiana, or Teagle, of New Jersey, might tell him, on the trans-Atlantic telephone, what to do. The message might read:

"We are going down as far as nine thousand feet here, try that. There are often deeper, richer sands below the shallow sands."

OR MUSSOLINI could call in his European neighbor, Deterding, who is no child in oil since he dominates the world's oil business now as Standard Oil once did before our wise men decided not to let American enterprises become too successful.

MUSSOLINI MIGHT even interest John D. himself, causing that ancient power to arouse from its Fafnir sleep and take a hand. Not long since the Rockefeller family, just to show it could be done, and for possible future use, brought in a well, far inside the Arctic circle, although it would cost fifty millions to run a pipe line up there.

It might amuse them to prove that oil underlies Sicily, perhaps on the very spot where Archimedes requested the soldier to get out of his sunlight. What a marvelous combination would come of Italian industry and abundant, cheap oil and gasoline.

Everyone wishes full success for the Azienda Generale.

ENGLAND SENTENCES Alfred Arthur Rouse to be hanged for the murder of a man unknown, something that has not happened in 145 years, and the jury took only 15 minutes to decide. The British believe in punishing murder. We believe in coddling, or ignoring it. It's a crime in England, an industrial institution here.

ROUSE HAD become involved in love affairs and desired to disappear, without dying. His automobile was burned, and in it was found the charred corpse of a man, not Rouse, who was disappointed in his murder theory that his own death would be taken for granted.

How he got the man into the car and burned him is not known. Sherlock Holmes would have advised him to buy a corpse and burn that. In case

POSTMASTER JOB GIVEN ANDERSON

Senator Reed Recommends Successor to G. W. Gosser, Who Retired Last July

James B. Anderson, assistant postmaster, today was recommended for appointment as postmaster of Pittsburgh, by Senator David A. Reed, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington.

The recommendation was made to President Hoover who will transmit it to the Senate for confirmation. Anderson will succeed George W. Gosser, who retired last July 1 after nine years in that post. Since his retirement the office has been filled temporarily by W. A. Kenyon, postal inspector.

Mr. Anderson was exclusively reported in Sunday's Sun-Telegraph as the choice Senator Reed would recommend to the President.

Mr. Anderson, a veteran of 31 years postal service, lives in Crafton Heights. One other man in the service, L. L. Hill, assistant superintendent of mails and a resident of Wilkinsburg, had been considered for the post. He has served 41 years in the postoffice.

AUTO SPEEDS AT 240 MILES

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Capt. Malcolm Campbell, British contender for the world's automobile speed record, today attained an unofficial speed of approximately 240 miles an hour on a practice run over the ocean course.

Franco Life Term Sought by Spain

MADRID, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—It was reported today that the government was prepared to ask a sentence of life imprisonment for Ramon Franco, distinguished aviator, now a refugee in France, for his part in the unsuccessful revolution of last December. Although he and several other rebel fliers are now outside Spain, it is planned to court-martial them here nevertheless.

Harold Lloyd's Son Thrives in Incubator

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 2.—(INS.)—Harold Lloyd, Jr., son of the screen comedian, was reported in such "good condition" today at a hospital here it was expected his mother—formerly Mildred Davis, film actress—would be allowed to see him this week. Since his birth, January 25, Harold, Jr., has been fed and housed in an especially-constructed-and-heated incubator.

HACK WILSON SIGNS HERE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Hack Wilson, star outfielder of the Chicago Cubs and champion home run hitter of the major leagues last season, climaxed a conference with William L. Veeck, president of the Cubs, here today by signing a one-year contract.

Wilson whose salary demands were said to be $35,000 or $40,000 for the 1931 campaign, came here from his Martinsburg (W. Va.) home this morning and was joined by Veeck, who arrived from Chicago. The salary conference got under way at the Schenley Hotel shortly before noon. No announcement of an agreement was made when time was taken out for lunch, but Wilson placed his sig-

G. O. P. to Run Baird For Governor of N. J.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Senator Kean said today David Baird, Jr., of Camden, N. J., was expected to be the Republican organization's choice for governor of New Jersey.

Kean said former Senator Baird's acceptance was expected within a few days, and that petitions placing him in nomination would be circulated immediately.

Bishop's Son Faces Jury in Slaying

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—The state and defense versions of the killing of 73-year-old David Paynter, beaten fatally in a melee in a West End avenue lodging house last April, were put before a jury today in the trial of James Matthem Maxon, Jr. Maxon, 21-year-old son of the Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Tennessee, is charged with second degree murder. His home is in Chattanooga.

YOUTH KILLED, GIRL SHOT IN ROW

Less than an hour after he was alleged to have fatally shot Ralph Marzorso, 23, of 1041 Wheeler street, and wounded his daughter, Jennie Corona, 18, Louis Corona, 46, Indianola miner, slashed his throat in Oakmont Police Station, inflicting wounds which may prove fatal.

The girl is in Citizens' General Hospital, New Kensington; Corona was taken from the Oakmont lockup to Pittsburgh Hospital, and the body of Marzorso was removed to the county morgue. County detectives and deputy coroners have begun an investigation.

VERSIONS DIFFER

Detectives say Corona resented Marzorso's attentions to the daughter. A different story is told by Oakmont police, who say Corona told them he quarreled with Marzorso about repairing Corona's machine.

Corona, according to Patrolman John Couch, of Oakmont, also was in fear of physical injury at Marzorso's hands.

SON TELLS OF THREAT

Fred Corona, 15, who witnessed the argument prior to the shooting from a bedroom door, told police Marzorso threatened his father with a razor when Corona ordered his daughter's friend from the house. He said:

"After the man pulled a razor from his pocket my father returned to his bedroom to get his gun. I closed the door, and a minute later I heard the shots."

Corona was apprehended in Indianola while he was attempting to leave the town, according to Patrolman John Douglass, industrial policeman employed by the Inland Collieries Company, who made the arrest.

151 Chinese Caught In Opium Raid

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 2.—(INS.)—The crash of ax and crowbar against heavily barricaded doors today shattered the furtive stillness of Newark's underground Chinatown and signaled one of the largest opium raids in history. Fifteen opium dens were raided simultaneously by a group of 60 federal narcotic agents, and 151 Chinese were placed under arrest.

Hoover's Mining Book Sales Grow

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—"The Principles of Mining," by Herbert Clark Hoover, has found 7,243 purchasers since it was first published in 1909. Since the author was elected to the presidency, the McGraw-Hill Book Company reports, the demand has increased by one-third.

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—President Hoover's good faith in opposing the $25,000,000 Red Cross relief fund was questioned in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Caraway (Dem.), of Arkansas, in a speech assailing the administration's opposition to direct federal aid for starving citizens.

He called on the President to declare whether he was "telling the truth" last December 4 when he announced that "no deserving citizen should go hungry or cold" or whether he was "telling the truth" when he opposed the $25,000,000 fund. Caraway charged the President did not tell the truth on one of these occasions. He asserted:

"We have a right to know when he was telling the truth.

Caraway said Hoover was "first a Democrat, then a Republican and God knows what he is now, but not a good American.

ASSAILS LEADERS

Caraway also amazed the Senate by revealing that Speaker Longworth, Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican floor leader; Representative Wood (Rep.), of Indiana, head of the House Appropriations Committee, and Representative Snell (Rep.), of New York, chairman of the House Ruels Committee—all of whom now oppose the Red Cross fund—had voted in 1919 to have the organization spend $100,000,000 for the relief of starving Europeans. He showed from the records that Wood had made the mo-

3.75 BEER BILL GIVEN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(INS.)—Adopting the principle of state rights on prohibition, Representative Cochran (Dem.), of Missouri, today introduced a bill in the House permitting states to legalize 3.75 beer and another amending the Webb-Kenyon act to give states the right to prohibit manufacture and sale of liquor as well as its importation.

Meanwhile premonitory rumblings of the prohibition battle that is to shake both major parties in the presidential campaign of 1932 are being heard with increasing frequency as the Seventy-second Congress approaches its Constitutional fade-out on March 4.

The Wickersham report, with its anomalies and paradoxes, has served to stiffen the lines of both wets and drys. It can be, and is, pointed to with pride and viewed with alarm by all factions.

Alma Rubens Infatuated With Maurice Costello, Former Pittsburgher

By ALMA RUBENS

CHAPTER III.

When I "fell" for Arthur Johnson—mentally, of course—I entirely forgot about the broken heart I had acquired through my unfortunate "affair" with my scare-faced fireman. The handsome, dark-skinned leading man was to me the ultimate in the way of heroes, and nightly I kissed his picture before falling asleep with it under my pillow.

But this great love, too, quickly went the way of the other, and those later to come, without my ever having seen, in person, the John Barrymore of his day. The reason was because I fell in love with Maurice Costello (a former Pittsburgher), then in his heyday.

I think I loved him because he had cute dimples, just like my father's. And for days and days I mooned about, day-dreaming of the time to come when, as the actor's bride, I could sit on his knees and poke my fingers into the pits of his face formed when he smiled.

"Don't you remember, Sid, the day I applied to you for a job?" I asked.

"Do I remember Rose La France?" he chuckled. "Do I?

Guthrie Scores Victory in Fight Against Contract Awarded Poole Company

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—The State Supreme Court today reversed the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court in the matter of the validity of a contract awarded to the Poole Engineering and Machine Company for 1,000 voting machines and directed the court to issue the injunction.

The injunction proceedings were brought by Francis S. Guthrie, a taxpayer, against the Poole Company and the county commissioners, city controller and city treasurer on the ground that in the awarding of the contract to the Poole Company the laws regulating competitive bidding were not complied with.

The Poole company's bid was $1,120 each for the machines, while the bid of the only other competitor, the Automatic Voting Machine Corporation of Jamestown, N. Y., was $1,154.82.

PRINCIPAL OBJECTIONS

The principal objections raised were that no form of the bond which bidders would be required to furnish was submitted to any of the bidders; that there was no certified statement by the Poole company as to where and for how many years its machines had been actually in use and had given satisfactory service, and that no demonstration had been given of the machine's effectiveness in the presence of the County Commissioners, all of which were required by the law and specifications.

BUTLER TRIAL FEBRUARY 16

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(INS.)—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, U. S. Marine Corps, will be tried by a general court martial on February 16 for the reflections which he cast upon Premier Mussolini, of Italy, as a "hit and run driver."

This decision was reached today and announced by Secretary of the Navy Adams, after a conference with President Hoover, and after strong intimation had come from the WWhite House that the proceedings against Butler might be dropped and he be reprimanded instead of tried.

The Philadelphia Navy Yard was chosen as the locale for the trial, which promises to be spectacular.

The project of abandoning the trial was considered and then apparently rejected on the basis that the proceedings already had gone too far to permit it. The charges and specifications, however, probably will be softened somewhat from what was originally proposed.

Prince Defies Sweden's King; Ready to Elope

The 21-year-old son of Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, who is style consultant in a New York dress shop, and Prince Wilhelm of Sweden, encountered royal opposition to the marriage. It was understood here that the prince threatened to elope with the girl of his choice if his grandfather and father did not withdraw objections to the marriage.

King Gustave concluded after a long and earnest consideration that it was impossible for him to consent to the marriage, according to reliable information here.

In a communique issued by the grand marshal of the court, it was pointed out that Prince Lennart's announcement of his engagement to a commoner is a violation of the Swedish constitution, which specifically provides that a prince of the royal house must not marry without the consent of his sovereign.

The royal youth's decision means that he will forfeit his title of prince and surrender his right of succession to the throne, but as a Swedish citizen, probably with the courtesy title of count, he will be able to marry the girl of his choice and to build a career as a farmer, a pursuit which long has interested him.

Punxy'Chuck Sees Shadow, 6 Weeks More of Winter

From his weather works on Gobblers' Knob, Canoe Ridge, close to Punxsutawney, the groundhog today predicted six weeks of cold weather. The weather sage, according to reports, saw his shadow at 8 a. m., and returned immediately to his lair, for another six-week snooze.

At the official weather bureau on the top floor of the Oliver Building, reports from Punxsy were greeted with disdain. Said Observer W. S. Brotzman:

"We are not interested in the least."

One Pittsburgh groundhog which has been housed in an East End basement was reported snoozing soundly today. Lured from his lair in the cellar of Barney Werksman, 6405 Stanton avenue, by a sun-lamp, last week he had returned to his sleep and was not to be enticed out again.

Two Crafton woodchucks also were reported sleeping soundly. They are owned by A. J. Voelker, 115 Noble avenue, and are burrowed in under his tin shop in the rear yard.

PINCHOT CHIEFS PLAN COUNTER-MOVE ON UTILITIES QUIZ

SUBSTITUTE COMMITTEE SOUGHT

Governor Wants Group of 9 For Probe, 3 Each Named By Senate, House and Self

By E. W. PRENDERGAST,
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 2.—The Pinchot forces are expected to present a counter-resolution in the House tonight, asking a public utility investigation in which the administration will seek a committee of nine—three each to be named by the Senate, House and the Governor.

Pinchot leaders denied the report, maintaining that they planned making whatever changes in the bill they desire when it reached the House. The rumor persisted, however, as one of the feints in the shadow-boxing which will delay interminably any possibility of a public utilities investigation.

PROPOSAL TO COMMITTEE

Anti-administration leaders say the administration proposal will go to the judiciary special committee. The Earnest inquiry resolution calling for a 10-man committee, five from each house, has reposed in a Senate committee for a week.

It was indicated today that the Earnest resolution will see the light of day tomorrow, but members of the Philadelphia group point out that the routine and obstacles it must meet will delay its actual effect until March 25, nearly two months away.

Then, it was said, it will be amended beyond present recognition, with the Pinchot group forcing changes. All is prophecy it will be this resolution, if any, that will emerge.

Gov. Pinchot had this to say:

"There is no chance, in my opinion, of the Assembly concurring in an investigation appropriation for either house alone."

REITERATES STAND

He repeated his statement that an investigation of public utilities would be welcomed by him and that he would appear as a witness.

The House is known to be pro-Pinchot and the Senate, particularly the proposed committee, anti-Pinchot.

The Governor announced that he would present his budget to the Legislature Tuesday of next week, along with his message. He announced also that the first unemployment report would be made in conjunction with the message.

The first administration bill will also be presented next week. The Governor said he was not certain what issue the bill will touch. He said also that projected inquiry on public utilities would not halt any of his proposed legislation.

STATE BALANCE $51,412,873

HARRISBURG, Feb. 2—There was a balance of $51,412,873 in the general fund at the beginning of February State Treasurer Edward Martin announced today. Receipts during January were $25,566,301 and disbursements amounted to $16,263,429.

At the close of January all funds in the treasury, general and special, contained $75,867,941 as compared with $66,565,069 at the end of 1930.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Feb. 2.—(INS.)—Due to alleged defalcations on the part of C. Bruce Gardner, vice-president and cashier of the People's National Bank of Osceola Mills, near here, the institution failed to open its doors today. Gardner was held in jail here.

Jailed 12 Years, Poison Slayer Seeks Freedom

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Ruth Garrison, poison slayer of Mrs. Douglas Storrs in a tearoom of a department store here, has returned from a ward for the criminally insane to renew a fight for freedom.

Miss Garrison, 30 now, was accompanied here yesterday by her attorneys, Warden C. E. Long and Chief Matron E. E. Stillman from the prison in which she has spent almost 12 years.

She said:

"I am grateful for the opportunity to be heard in court. I have no prophecy to make as to the outcome but I am hopeful. I feel that I am sane and can safely mingle again with society. All I want is to be left alone to find my way in the world again."

Her attorneys said they had eight witnesses to testify to the sanity of their client.

A jury in May, 1919, found Miss Garrison not guilty of poisoning Mrs. Storrs by reason of insanity. Then it determined she was unsafe to be at large and compromised by committing her to the ward for the criminally insane.

Miss Garrison was employed as a clerk for the attorney's information bureau, near the sheriff's office in the County-City Building. There she met Douglas Storrs, a deputy sheriff.

They became infatuated, and she made an appointment with his wife in an effort to persuade her to get a divorce. Mrs. Storrs refused. As they sat at the table in a tea room the 18-year-old girl scattered poison on Mrs. Storrs' salad. The woman, stricken, was carried out of the tea room and died.

Due to this record Caraway demanded that the House Republican leaders tell the country when they were telling the truth.

Caraway explained that Congress voted a $100,000,000 fund in 1919 for the relief of starving Europeans. He read the personal appeal made by Mr. Hoover, then federal food administrator, for enactment of this fund, and showed from the records that Wood made the motion that the money be turned over to the Red Cross for distribution. He even showed that Wood, Tilson, Snell, Longworth, and even Senator Fess, of Ohio, now Republican national chairman, but then a member of the House, had voted for this motion.

TILSON CRITICIZED

Touching on Tilson's week-end announcement that a direct appropriation for the Red Cross would "stab" organization in the heart, Caraway added:

"Let him tell the starving people of America whether he was telling the truth when he voted that $100,000,000 to the Red Cross in 1919, or when he said that such an appropriation for Americans would stab the Red Cross in the heart. When did he use the assassin's dagger?"

Caraway demanded that Chairman Payne, of the Red Cross, tell "the origin of this determination to decline a federal contribution," adding that Payne had taken no such stand when he appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The Senator read to the Senate an advertisement asking for contributions to the Red Cross which said that hundreds of Americans were "hungry, ragged and cold," adding:

"If that is so, the Red Cross is not meeting the situation."

MINERS STRIKE OVER PAY CUT

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 2.—One hundred and ten miners quit work at Edna No. 1 mine, owned by the Hillman Coal and Coke Company and operated by John R. Carr, this morning, following a meeting last night addressed by representatives of the National Miners' Union. A wage cut was reported to be the cause.

As Operator Carr approached the Edna No. 1 mine this morning he was greeted by pickets, who refused to leave the roadway. He ran his car into a ditch to avoid striking some of the men, he reported, badly damaging his car.

Anne Nichols Loses 'Irish Rose' Appeal

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—The run of "Abie's Irish Rose," in the courts was ended today by the Supreme Court's declination to hear a suit for infringement of copyright brought by its author, Ann Nichols.

Miss Nichols sought to have set aside a Circuit Court of Appeals decision that the photoplay "The Cohens and the Kellys" did not infringe her copyright on "Abie's Irish Rose."

CONGRESSMAN'S RUM PLEA LOST

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—The District of Columbia of Appeals today held that Representative Denison, of Illinois, must stand trial on an indictment charging him with possession of a trunk containing intoxicating liquors.

The decision of Justice Orsdel reversed the action of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, which had sustained a demurrer to the indictment on the ground that it failed to sufficiently acquaint Denison with the charges.

Justice Van Orsdel, in sustaining the language of the indictment, said the national prohibition act is in the nature of a police regulation of nationwide extent, involving wide scope and complications in its enforcement.

Director of Closed Bank Under Arrest

NEW YOAK, Feb. 2.—(INS.)—Joseph C. Brownstone, director of the closed Bank of United States, was placed under arrest today when he refused to answer questions put to him by Max D. G. O. P. SEEKING COMPROMISE ON BONUS

Advocates Asked to Accept Half Cash; N. Y. Banker Warns of Peril in Bonds

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Talk of compromise between the administration and Democrats upon soldiers' bonus legislation was heard in Capitol corridors today, despite the standpat attitude of both sides.

Representative Patman, a Texas Democrat, who has sponsored cash payment of veterans' adjusted compensation certificates, said indications had come from administration quarters that a compromise calling for an outlay of $800,000,000 would be acceptable.

This plan provides for additional loans on the certificates with a maximum of 52 per cent indebtedness instead of the present limit of 22 per cent.

Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the National City Bank of New York, predicted that "hundreds" of small bank failures would follow a $3,500,000,000 federal bond issue to defray the cost of cashing soldier bonus certificates.

SEES PRICE DROP

The financier's warning was given in response to a question in the Senate banking inquiry whether the bonus bonds should be accorded the same treatment as other government securities in banking operations.

Mitchell asserted emphatically that "they will have to have all the advantages of government bonds, plus."

If such a bond issue were decided upon, he added, existing government bonds would be forced down in price until they were selling to yield ¾ to 1 per cent higher than at present. He said municipal, state and industrial bonds would show even greater declines.

Senator Bulkley (Dem.), of Ohio, commented not many persons expected the bonus certificates to be cashed at their face value.

Priest Advocates Pay to Veterans

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 2.—Verbally tearing the report of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon on cash payment of soldiers' bonuses to pieces, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Church of the Little Flower, today had favored payment of the huge sum of bonuses and attacked the attitude of the national government.

Speaking over a national radio hookup, the priest attacked the theory that finance must be protected and that life comes secondary, which, he said, was expressed in Mellon's report to President Hoover.

Non-payment of the soldiers' bonuses may be excellent finance, he said, but it is unchristian.

In justice to the veterans, he said, the bonuses should be paid. He insisted that it would not cause a further financial crisis, as the report of Secretary Mellon indicated.

Father Coughlin insisted that Mellon stressed the business depression too greatly in refusing the soldiers' bonuses. He said that there has been three depressions in Mellon's reign, in 1921, 1924 and in 1930. The other two were far greater than the present one, he insisted.

Crows, Jackdaws Steal Golf Balls

CARDIFF, Wales. — (INS.)—Crows and jackdaws in South Wales have developed the habit of swooping down to steal balls from the fairways of the local golf courses.

Four players, who ran for shelter from rain at Tredegar Park, found, upon their return, that crows had stolen all four balls. Caddies climbed the trees and found several dozen new balls hidden in the nests.

GRAHAM HOLDS PROHIBITION ENFORCIBLE

Explains Wickersham Report To Ministers; Calls It 'Comforting' to Drys

The Eighteenth Amendment never has been enforced, and, accordingly, should not be criticized, is the opinion of United States Attorney Louis E. Graham.

The opinion was voiced before 300 clergymen today as the federal attorney discussed the legal angles of the Wickersham report at the Union Ministerial meeting in Smithfield Street Methodist Episcopal Church.

ONLY 7 READ REPORT

The Allegheny county clergymen were reprimanded by Graham when a hand-raising vote conducted by the speaker revealed that only seven of the ministers present had read the Wickersham report throughout.

Graham described the report as "frank and honest" and interpreted it as being opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment, to the federal and state governments going into the liquor business, to the restoration of liquor, and to the modification of the Eighteenth Amendment.

After asserting that the Eighteenth Amendment was not enforced, Graham said:

URGES CO-OPERATION

He urged co-operation of the states in enforcing prohibition, citing that 10 of the states had repealed their laws concerning enforcement.

The clergymen were asked to conduct a campaign of education to arouse public opinion in favor of prohibition.

He pointed out that all federal members of the Wickersham committee were opposed to any change in the amendment, feeling that conditions for enforcement were improving.

"TANGIBLE SUMMARY"

Commenting upon the reception of the report, Graham averred the drys found in it a source of delightful comfort, while a scathing denunciation of prohibition was drawn from it by the anti-drys.

The public as a whole, according to Graham, received the report as a definite, tangible summary, pointing the way to a future solution of the prohibition question.

Before Graham's address, a resolution protesting anti-Sabbath legislation as proposed in the Wettach and Musmanno bills in the Legislature, was unanimously passed.

Missionary, Lost In Arctic Ice, Found

EDMONTON, Alta., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—The Rev. J. H. Webster, Anglican missionary at Coppermine, lost for almost a week on the Arctic ice fields, was found Friday by Eskimo searchers. He was exhausted and frost bitten. The young missionary left Coppermine to visit the Eskimo sealing camps. Two days later the lead-dog of his team made his way into an Eskimo camp and the natives started search.

Steer Shot After Terrorizing Butler

BUTLER, Pa., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—A steer which roamed a district near here for two days, injuring one man and causing damage to the automobile of a rural mail carrier, has been shot. The animal broke loose as William Kramer was unloading it from a truck. Fear for the safety of school children prompted the shooting of the steer.

Farm Price Level Drops 40 Points

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—The farm price index was reported by the Department of Agriculture to have dropped to the lowest level since January, 1912, during the month of December 15 to January 15.

The general level of farm prices slumped three points to 94 per cent of the pre-war level in mid-January. It was 40 points under a year ago.

2 Babies Die in Fire, 4 of Family Burned

CUYAHOGA FALLS, O., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Rita, 3, and Frank Ridenour, Jr., 10 months, were killed and their parents and two other children were burned, in an explosion and fire in their home here.

Bodies of the two children were found by firemen, lying side by side in the kitchen beside the body of a pet dog.

SLASHES THROAT

After being lodged in the Oakmont jail, Corona conversed for 20 minutes with Sergt. Edward Plummer and Patrolman Couch. He was left alone for a few moments, and when the officers returned they discovered he had slashed his throat with a pocket knife. Dr. Donald Fusia ordered the man removed to Pittsburgh Hospital.

County Detectives John Carmichael and Harry Barker hope to question both the father and daughter today, although it is feared the condition of both may make it impossible for them to talk. The girl was shot twice.

Marzorso was dead when Dr. Joseph Griffiths, of Indianola, arrived at the Corona home. He ordered the girl to the hospital.

Marzorso, according to his foster mother, Anna Marzorso, 75, who conducts a rooming house at the Wheeler street address, left home Saturday in company with Corona. The Indianola miner had come to Pittsburgh and had taken Marzorso home with him to repair the automobile.

Einstein's Wine Cellar Looted

CAPUTH, Germany, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Burglars broke into Prof. Albert Enstein's wine cellar at his summer home last night, carrying off what they did not drink on the premses. It was the second time thieves had broken into the scientist's home since he went to the United States. In December, all they took was Frau Einsten's overcoat.

ROOSEVELT SHAPES '32 ISSUES

Campaign Fuel in Dry Law, Farm, Utilities and Job Policies of N. Y. Governor

Universal Service.

ALBANY, Feb. 2.—On the threshold of the second month of the 1931 session of the New York State Legislature, political Albany took census of cardinal developments today and found Gov. Roosevelt's attitude clearly defined on four issues destined to be dominant in the 1932 presidential campaign.

These same issues stand out in bold relief as major questions in this state. However, Gov. Roosevelt in his treatment of them has overstepped state boundaries and has envisioned these problems in their nation-wide aspect.

The four issues are repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment; water power and public utility regulation; a long range farm relief program and constructive proposals to combat and ameliorate future economic depressions and unemployment crises.

BOTH PARTIES ANTI-DRY

While the first month of the session has been significant for executive declaration of position on major questions, it has not seen parallel eagerness on the part of the Republican-controlled legislature to commit itself on the matter involved.

The single exception is the question of prohibition repeal. Both parties in New York state are now engaged in a race to place the state on record for abolition of the national dry law.

The G. O. P. state leadership, it can fairly be said, will exercise deliberation in reaching its decisions on the rest of these commanding issues. The relation they are likely to bear to the governor's presidential potentialities will govern the Republican majority to a marked degree.

GOVERNOR BLAZES TRAIL

The governor blazed the way for his party's liberal stand on prohibition when, last fall, he declared for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and restoration of state rights. His views were incorporated in the party's platform at the Syracuse state convention. They are ready for translation into action by means of a resolution, sponsored by Democratic leaders, Senator Downing and Assemblyman Steingut, calling for immediate repeal of the Volstead and associated enforcement acts and convocation of a national constitutional convention to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment.

Launching the aforesaid series with his stand on water power, the governor hurled a challenge at the public utility interests of the nation. He stands for creation of a state water power authority to develop the hydro-electric resources of the St. Lawrence under state auspices and to arm the state with right to construct its own transmission and distribution lines, in the event the power interests refuse to enter into a fair and reasonable contract for handling the generated energy.

URGES FARM SURVEY

In presenting his long range farm relief program to the Legislature the Governor pointed out it "might be of direct value to other states." The Roosevelt plan is a 10-year survey designed to index agricultural, reforestation or other purposes for which every acre of land is best adapted. He estimates it will cost $750,000 and has asked for $97,000 for this year.

Gov. Roosevelt sponsored another issue when he called a conference in Albany a week ago of the chief executives of Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Jersey to grapple with the problem of unemployment prevention.

Coolidge Hits Gossip About Public Leaders

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 2.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The episode involving Gen. Butler illustrates one of the peculiarities of our military organization. It is very difficult to regulate the speech of our officers. The public usually assumes that the right of free speech is universal and without control. So such breaches of discipline are usually ignored. But such a freedom does not exist in the case of officers since they are voluntarily in a service where the right to talk is necessarily limited.

Calvin Coolidge

The ease with which gossip concerning persons in important public positions finds credence is also remarkable. The most trivial incident is passed around and magnified until it becomes a serious accusation. The victims are usually without remedy. When anything of that kind occurs with reference to the officers of a foreign government it is especially reprehensible because it would be none of our concern even if it were true and because its repetition is very injurious to the friendly relations of the innocent people of the two countries. There are good things enough in the world and good traits enough in all persons to supply about all the topics needed for discussion. International good will should not be imperiled by inconsiderate statements from any source.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

FALL'S APPEAL BEFORE COURT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Arguments for reversing the conviction of Albert B. Fall for accepting a bribe began today in the District of Columbus Court of Appeals.

Counsel for the former interior secretary contended he had lacked any jurisdiction over the Elk Hills, Cal., naval oil reserve, the leasing of which led to his being judged guilty a year ago of taking $100,000 to influence him to award the lease to a company of Edward L. Doheny.

He was fined $100,000 and sentenced to one year in prison. Justice William Hitz announced at the time that if he was on the the bench when th case was returned for sentence, he would suspend the jail term.

Frank Hogan, Fall's chief counsel, argued the former cabinet officer could not be charged with bribery because the law required that a bribery charge could be lodged only when a government officer accepted it to influence his official acts.

FORD'S AMAZON FAILURE HINTED

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Brazil's dream of conquest of the mighty Amazon jungles through the efficient exploitation of its rubber resources by the American auto king, Henry Ford, appeared today to have collapsed.

Advices from Para, on the Amazon, said Mr. Ford, after spending millions of dollars, had found himself unable to combat native antagonism to efficiency methods popular in Detroit, and is giving up his huge rubber experiment on the Tapajos River.

Employes on the farms recently have been reduced from 3,000 to 200. Some Americans working on the project have resigned. Others, assigned to an Australian post, now are in Para awaiting transportation.

Among the American methods introduced to which the natives objected, it is understood, are punching a time clock and standing in line with trays for food at the mess hall.

CIVILIZATION'S methods improve even executions. Rouse will be hanged, and promptly, but out of sight, in a prison cell yard. When the thing happened 145 years ago, in 1786, a sailor, never identified, was murdered near Hindhead. Three men were hanged in chains, on the scene of the crime, for the edification of the public.

Mohammed, it is said, trained a pigeon to eat dry peas out of his ear. The pigeon would fly down before the multitude, light on the prophet's shoulder and put its beak in his ear. No one doubted that the pigeon brought a special message from Allah, himself.

But that would be nothing to proving you had actually talked with a human being, five thousand miles away, reaching him in less than the thirty-seventh part of a second.

Egypt's government, trying to hold up cotton, as Uncle Sam is trying to hold up wheat, accumulated gigantic quantities of cotton, and has not dared sell it, for fear of ruining the market price and ruining itself politically.

Now it proposes to get rid of the cotton gradually, selling three hundred million pounds of its accumulations each year.

WEATHER BALKS DO-X TAKEOFF

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Butting its way through a choppy sea without attempting to take off, the German flying boat DO-X steamed out of the harbor under its own power this morning and cruised 12 miles to Gando Bay, from which it will continue its projected trans-Atlantic flight tomorrow if the weather is favorable.

She dropped her anchor in a sheltered cove and waited for the arrival of a barge bringing nearly a thousand gallons of fuel, more than enough to carry her to the Cape Verde Islands, the next stop on her way to Brazil and New York.

The DO-X came here Saturday after a seven-hour flight from Lisbon. Bad weather forced postponement of the next hop to the Cape Verde Islands Sunday.

The crew remained aboard the vessel last night, refusing invitations to ceremonials in the city.

Italian Army Fliers Sail Home on Feb. 7

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 2.—(INS.)—Gen. Italo Balbo, returning here after a visit to Santos, announced today that he and his companion trans-Atlantic fliers would depart for Italy February 7, aboard the steamer Conte Rosso.

Probe Death of Man Found Hurt in Cell

Police today were investigating the death of John Golab, 64, of 227 Fifty-seventh street, in St. Francis Hospital yesterday from a fractured skull. He was found unconscious on the floor of a cell in the Forty-third Street Police Station a few hours after he had been arrested at Fifty-fifth and Butler streets on a charge of intoxication.

BENNETT MUM ON STEEL PLAN

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(INS.)—The Canadian prime minister, R. B. Bennett, en route to Ottawa from Washington, was a visitor in New York today.

He declined to comment on Canadian affairs and refused to discuss his visit to Washington other than to term it "unofficial." He declined to ascribe any other reason for his trip than "to look over the Canadian legation" at the Capitol.

The premier was expected to spend most of the day in New York. It was reported he would confer with James Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation concerning an enlargement of the Ibijway Steel plant. The premier would not comment on the report.

WIDOW'S PLANE BELIEVED SEEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Possibility that wreckage of the ill-fated air plane Tradewind had been sighted floating in the Atlantic near the Azores was seen today in a message received at the Navy Department from the steamship Youngstown.

The massage said the Youngstown had passed gray-colored wreckage resembling a section of an airplane wing about 275 miles northwest of Horta, on the Island of Fayal, Azores.

Weather Conditions.

Pressure is relatively high over most of the country this morning, with weak centers of disturbance off the New England Coast, the Canadian Northwest and Southern Texas. The plateau high appeared to be moving out on Saturday morning, but this morning it has entered over the same place where it persisted most of the winter, and it is building up again into a marked high pressure area. Precipitation was very light and was limited to light snow over the northeastern states and rain in Texas. Temperature changes were towards warmer, much above the seasonal normal over all the northern states, and there is no cold weather in the Canadian Northwest nor in Alaska.

60 'FOG DEATHS' LAID TO FUMES

BRUSSELS, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Industrial sulphurous fumes which combined with the fog to make an acid which ate at the lung cells of those breathing the mixture were blamed today for the death of more than 60 persons in the Meuse Valley in early December.

The newspaper Nation Belge said that the inquest which has been sitting at Liege had found the deaths had occurred from inhalation of a sulphurous anhydride. While the toxic fumes are perrental in the industrial district, it is only rarely that such extreme fog conditions as occurred at this time make them dangerous.

The report of the inquest is only provisional. A supplementary report to be published shortly is expected to state the exact source of the noxious fumes which are regarded generally as having come from industrial plants around Engis.

PASTOR SCORES RUM KILLING

LUNENBERG, N. S., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Throngs attending funeral services for Skipper William Cluett, of the schooner Josephine K, heard a minister describe his death during a rum running chase off New York as "murder on the high seas."

The Rev. Maj. W. E. Ryder eulogized Cluett as "a good husband and father, a good friend and as master mariner," and said his death by Coast Guard gunfire was "one of the inevitable tragedies that follow the hypocrisy of prohibtion."

Emphasizing that he was not justifying the business Cluett was engaged in, he declared he was "confident British justice will see fair play meted out."

"This tragedy must not be hushed up. Incidents of this sort are becoming almost a daily occurrence. They are evidence of the futility of trying to make a country dry by prohibition. Capt. Cluett was simply the commander of a supply boat carrying a commodity demanded by the people of the United States.

CANNON READY TO FACE QUIZ

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., was in a hospital here today on the eve of hearings to be conducted by his church into charges against him, but his family said he would leave the hospital tomorrow to defend himself.

The Southern Methodist dry leader recently returned from Texas, where he recuperated from an illness which had confined him to bed for two months. His recovery, members of his family said, was not complete. The present trip to the hospital was to rest from the long journey from Texas.

Tomorrow 12 elders of the church will sit as an investigating body to hear charges filed against the bishop by four ministers. If the charges are found to have weight, Cannon will be suspended from active duty until 1934 when the general conference of the church will bring him to trial. The nature of the charges has never been disclosed.

AIMEE TO VISIT GRAVE OF MATE

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Rolf Semple, son of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, told the congregation at Angelus Temple his mother, and sister, Roberta Semple, were aboard a ship bound for Shanghai. The evangelist's object, he said, was a visit to the grave of her first husband, Robert Semple, who died while a missionary in China 18 years ago.

Rolf, speaking from the pulpit, said he received a cablegram from his mother in Honolulu authorizing him to make the announcement.

Mrs. McPherson disappeared from Angelus Temple, where she is pastor, January 22. Friday Honolulu dispatches said Mrs. McPherson and her daughter had visited there during the regular halt of the steamer President Wilson and then contiued toward Shanghai.

American Rector In Rome Ceremony

2 Scottdale Banks Announce Merger

CONNELSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 2.—Through negotiations completed Saturday, the First National and the Broadway National Banks of Scottdale were consolidated. The First National has acquired all of the property and assets of the Broadway National and has assumed all liabilities. The merger was effective this morning, with all business being transacted in the banking rooms of the First National.

MacDonald Urges Hecklers Desist

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald appealed to members of the House of Commons today to abstain from asking him questions about the progress of the Franco-Italian naval discussion. The discussions still were proceeding, he said, and may be prolonged, and it was not possible at the moment to give details for which he had been asked.

Gen. Edwards Gains After Sinking Spell

BOSTON, Feb. 2.—(INS.)—Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, aged war-time commander of the 26th (Yankee) Division, suffering from a stomach ailment in Massachusetts General Hospital, suffered a sinking spell yesterday, but was said to be somewhat recovered today, "resting comfortably."

HOTEL HELD UP, GANG GETS $500

MONESSEN, Pa., Feb. 2.—Six armed bandits held up several men and women guests in the Victoria Hotel, Schoonmaker avenue, here, and escaped with cash and loot approximating $500 early today, police were told. The thugs cut telephone wires before entering the lobby, where their leader, with a revolver in each hand, ordered all hands up.

While persons in the lobby were being forced to hand over their money, several bandits made a search of the rooms for additional sums.

The thugs refused to steal anything other than cash. Escape was made in an automobile, which was last seen going in the direction of Donora, according to a police report.

Wife Fails to Halt Millionaire's Suit

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—The Missouri Supreme Court today refused to interfere in the marital affairs of Hugh W. Thomasson, 73-year-old St. Louis millionaire, and his 29-year-old wife. An application by attorneys for Mrs. Thomasson, seeking a writ of prohibition against annulment proceedings instituted by the bridegroom, was denied.

RACKET ADOPTS NEW 'NUMBER'

The "numbers" racket today was given six months to live, if it hopped on the Homestead-Braddock bandwagon and based its lottery on the United States Treasury and Customs House daily reports.

In striking out for itself, the Braddock and Homestead crew was doing nothing original, it was pointed out; the pace was set by powerful New York racketeers last week.

Announcement was made in the eastern boroughs yesterday that on and after today a big racketeer will book on the two reports. The numbers will be chosen from the ten thousand and thousand columns of the custom report and from the thousand column of the treasury balance.

General opinion among the gamblers seemed to be that, in seizing the helm, the racket leaders had seized with it a very embarrassing responsibility. If the others follow him, it was freely predicted, on his shoulders will fall the blame, if the treasury and customs reports are issued in figures or censored. And, whether that step is taken or not, it is said, he will be blamed in a very short time, for the bankruptcy of every pool operating on the figures.

Girl, 19, Weds Man 61; Cancels $10,000 Debt

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Frank Henzel, 61-year-old farm laborer, and his 19-year-old bride today vigorously defended their marriage following assertions of his relatives that the union had been contracted in payment of a debt.

Arrested on the assertion her husband was missing, the bride, Celia, was held for questioning at the request of Henzel's relatives in Beatrice, Neb., who charged she had been given in marriage when Henzel agreed to dismiss suit for $10,000 debt against the girl's mother. She is Mrs. Charity Brennan, wife of a Carthage, Mo., farmer. The girl denied she had married Henzel for his money and said she loved him.

Henzel, found late last night in a Denver bus station, substantiated the assertions of his relatives, but asserted his bride "did no wrong." He said Celia had agreed to marry him if he would dismiss the suit. He continued:

"She kept her word and married me and I kept mine and dismissed the suit."

Whiteman Denies Divorce Plan But Hints Discord

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 2.—(Universal)—Paul Whiteman, noted orchestra leader, last night denied reports he planned a divorce, but strongly intimated differences between his wife and himself have arisen.

Without specifically mentioning divorce, Whiteman said:

"There may be a conference between my wife and me in the spring. If anything happens, all the facts will be made public and there will be no scandal. It will be handled in a dignified manner."

As an afterthought he added:

"I don't know whether it will ever happen."

He blamed "being on the road, playing one night stands," which he said makes normal married life almost impossible.

Asked about a report that he is engaged to Margaret Livingston, he demanded:

"How can a man be engaged when he already has a wife and child and is not divorced?"

He said his wife has always received an allowance from him of $35,000 a year.

He admitted being a friend of Miss Livingston. He said he has taken her out to dinner, but he has taken other women to dinner also.

He praised his wife, saying:

HIRSCHFELD, 'EINSTEIN OF SEX,' SEES DRY REVOLT

DR. MAGNUS HIRSCHFELD,

Eminent German Authority on the Manifestations of Love, Who Has Often Been Called "The Einstein of Sex."

In a Dialogue with George Sylvester Viereck.

Place: Broadway, New York.

DISCOVERED: Dr. Magnus Hirschfeld, Director of the Berlin Institute for the Scientific Investigation of Sex, president of the World League for Sex Reform, and The Interviewer, emerging from a popular night club. Dr. Hirschfeld seems to be at home under the blazing billboards of the Metropolis. He is a scientist who does not remain closeted in his study, but who seeks and meets Life everywhere.

In Berlin Dr. Hirschfeld's investigations of the night life inspired a popular song which was sung in many music halls and immortalized in a phonograph record:

"Der Hirschfeld kommt, der Hirschfeld kommt."

I: How does night life of New York compare with the night life of Berlin?

HIRSCHFELD: For one thing, it is more expensive. Americans seem to value most those things for which they pay most.

I: Do you find our gaiety spontaneous?

HIRSCHFELD: Can you imagine a Bacchanalian revel with a cover charge of five dollars per head? The prices you pay for the inferior wine served in expensive speakeasies would have made Bacchus an unpopular divinity in the ancient world.

I: You barely grazed your glass with your lips.

HIRSCHFELD: I sipped enough to get the taste. I refuse, of course, even to touch the poisonous concoctions which you call cocktails, which seem to be so essential to Americans when they wish to make merry under the shadow of the Eighteenth Amendment.

I: You are opposed to prohibition?

HIRSCHFELD: I am equally opposed to prohibition and to alcohol. It may be that most Americans have so many inhibitions that they cannot release their libido, their joy in life and love, without a drink. And the more they pay for their drink the more of a "kick" they seem to get out of it.

A bottle of sparkling cider with the addition of adulterated alcohol and some coloring matter would give them no thrill if it were not sold to them as champagne for twenty-five dollars a bottle.

Dollar Emotions

The psycho-analysts claim that there is an intimate connection between certain vagaries of the libido and money. Americans have diverted so much of their energy from the field of romance and passion into the field of money-making and business that they are accustomed to express emotional values in terms of dollars.

One hundred thousand dollars, or even five hundred thousand, is claimed as balm for a broken heart. Women demand alimony, not merely for the sake of the luxuries which money affords, but because they seem more desirable to the men as well as to themselves if their affections are measured in large numerals.

The "sucker" who pays most for his wine, who tips the head waiter most, who is the most lavish spender, who is so liberal that every hostess in every night club knows his by his first name, is the king of passion, the most envied of men. But does he really know love? Are his heart affairs as synthetic as the whisky he drinks? Does he get or does he want from love or wine more than a "kick?"

I: Europeans are in the habit of looking upon Americans as a young people. Don't you think that something of the exuberance of youth prompts our hectic pursuit of pleasure?

HIRSCHFELD: Americans are not biologically or temperamentally a young people. I do not see in the dancing and clapping and drinking and petting and singing and stamping of your night clubs the spirit of youth or the joy of life. It is rather a flight from life and reality.

Young and old alike wander from the dansant to supper dance, from supper dance to night club, until the lights of Broadway fade in the gray dawn to escape from a sense of their own futility and to forget the frustration of their emotional life.

Synthetic Joy

That is the reason why your hilarity, which seems to me as artificial as your gin, drags out until the small hours of the night. The most dazzling performances, the most suggestive dances and songs are delayed until two or three in the morning. Perhaps it takes you so long to warm up to a point where you can forget your inhibitions under the double stimulant of the dance and the drink.

I: But surely our flaming youth is as youthful as youth everywhere?

HIRSCHFELD: Undoubtedly there is some genuine fun. Here and there the rowdy animal spirit breaks through the barriers of convention and artificial gaiety. But for the most part, I see no genuine enjoyment in the eyes of the young men and the young women whose vitality and whose passion are exhausted largely in the desperate attempt to make whoopee.

After drinking and shouting and dancing all night they have very little vitality left to give to each other. Their dancing and petting parties leave no room for real emotion. Love takes flight from the cold electric glare of the cabaret.

Eros "passes out" like the young votaries of the night club, too bleary-eyed and too weary to seek anything except forgetfulness.

Nietzsche, the greatest of modern philosophers, once made the statement that Christianity had poisoned the God of Love. But prohibition has done worse. It has made him sick in the stomach with Scotch imported straight from the bootlegger's bathtub!

Many of your young revelers dash from night club to night club because they have never learned the art of conversation and would bore each other to extinction if they were not hopping from place to place in a mild state of intoxication.

Hip Flask Halo

Then (he smiled) the element of bravado enters. It pleases youth to defy the law and to outdo its elders. The Eighteenth Amendment endows the hip flask with the halo of the forbidden, and throws the rosy veil of romance over the unspeakable boredom of night resorts enlivened by machine-made houris shaking their navels in serpentine dances.

I: What induces business men, men of maturity, position and wealth, to spend night after night in the night clubs?

HIRSCHFELD: Older men are usually even more inhibited than their children. The sons have at least heard of Freud. They have an inkling of the forces that batter day and night at the entrance of the unconscious. Their fathers have no understanding of the motives which impel them to prefer the speakeasy to the easy chair.

They try to forget the emptiness of their existence in the arms of pretty hostesses who do not love them and whom they do not love. They do not even expect love. They are satisfied with appearances. It pleases them to show off with bejeweled mistresses and bejeweled wives.

If the maitre de plaisir bows to them deferentially, if the performers pause before their table or plant a powdered kiss with mechanical naughtiness upon their clean-shaven cheeks, they feel that they have not lived in vain.

I: What is the psychological explanation of the desire of the "sugar daddy" to make a fool of himself in public, and to be proud of it?

HIRSCHFELD: A mild form of exhibition. Even if their own bosoms are empty of emotion, your "sugar daddies" get a vicarious thrill from the interest and from the envy which they arouse in others.

I: Haven't you noticed that the older men are usually a trifle more abandoned in their exaggerated jollity than the others?

HIRSCHFELD: They want to convince themselves that they are still young. In the forties there comes to most men something that resembles the "dangerous age" of women. In that period men commit many follies. They imagine that the best part of life is over, but they do not yet wish to admit it to themselves.

Herr Hauptmann

This feeling engenders in men of forty something which Gerhart Hauptmann has called the "Steinach Complex"—a desire for rejuvenation. Instead of seeking to remain young by exercising body and mind, they plunge into puerile dissipations and try to outrace their sons on the road to—

I: Hell?

Skull at Feast

HIRSCHFELD: No. But to arteriosclerosis, diabetes and kidney trouble! These older men who vainly seek an elixir of youth in post-Volstead champagne and post-Volstead highballs are to me intensely pathetic. The ancients placed a skull on the banquet table to remind them of the admonition: "Eat, drink and be merry; for tomorrow we die."

Your American business men would not tolerate such a reminder on the table when they feast. But it is always present in their minds. It would be much better if they put the skull on the table and discarded it from their minds.

I: Then you don't think we are a very happy people?

HIRSCHFELD: No. At any rate, there is little happiness in the night clubs. I have no doubt that there is much happiness in a million homes far away from the haunts of the socially elect. It may be that you are too rich—

I: That sounds rather ironical at the present moment when, hurled from the heights of our golden prosperity, we find ourselves in the nethermost depth of depression.

HIRSCHFELD: Even in your depression you are still far wealthier than any other nation on earth. Your depression is only an economic and psychological reaction, a katzenjammer after the excesses of the preceding period.

But it is not your riches that make you unhappy. The poor are not necessarily happier than the rich. Both poor and rich are unable to enjoy themselves because they have too many inherited inhibitions, too many impertinent laws and restrictions which interfere with their private lives.

I: Even your short sojourn in the United States must have convinced you that we are freeing ourselves from Puritan traditions. (We cross a street. Hirschfeld dodges a car.)

HIRSCHFELD: America is waking up intellectually. There are evidences everywhere of a rising tide of freedom. This revolt against old taboos expresses itself in the indignation against sumptuary legislation. It is articulate in your literature, in your plays and what Judge Lindsey has called the Revolt of Youth.

Judge Lindsey

Something (we are now stranded midways between two lines of cars) of the spirit for freedom appears even in your feverish night club life. I was not just when I called your night club antics solely a flight from life. They are also a protest against the dullness of the Puritan tradition and the dispiriting monotony of a mechanical civilization.

Hopeful Signs

The very dissatisfaction with yourselves that drives you to the night clubs is a hopeful sign. However, the rebellious spirit expresses itself more effectively on the college campus than in gilded night clubs.

I: What will be the end of it all?

HIRSCHFELD: You are beginning to emancipate yourself intellectually but you are not yet free emotionally and you certainly are not free legally. In time you will sweep away unhealthy emotional inhibitions and you will purge your statute books from the last vestige of the Dark Ages. Your Eighteenth Amendment is only one of many laws that must go before you can call yourselves a free people.

(We have reached the other side of the street. Hirschfeld continues, much relieved.)

The time will come when love in America will be free from medieval restrictions, when neither your gin nor your pleasure will be synthetic. When that time comes even the most tired of tired business men will have no need for night clubs.

(It is three o'clock in the morning. The lights of Broadway still blaze. Dr. Hirschfeld sinks wearily into a taxi that takes him to his hotel.)

SID GRAUMAN TURNED TABLES ON YOUNG ALMA RUBENS

HIRED 'ACTRESS' BUT FAILED TO SEND FOR HER

Say, Alma, did you really take us seriously?"

"Of course I did. When I told you that I was a quick-change artist, do you know what I thought a quick-change artist was. Well, I thought they changed slips of newspapers into money, and other feats of sleight-of-hand and legerdemain."

"Whatever in the world possessed you to pose as that, when you knew absolutely nothing about it?" he quizzed.

"Well, you and your father asked me what my stage specialty was and I was so floored that I couldn't think of anything else. As a matter of fact, now that the truth can be told, I never had seen a quick change artist, but had seen the designation in print somewhere and thought that it sounded good."

Ambitions at 14

All this, of course, occurred in San Francisco, when I was about 14. The Grauman Theater was on the route I covered daily going to and from the public school which I was then attending.

On this particular day, while in passing, I had seen the Graumans, father and son, lounging against an electric light pole in front of the box office. The impulse to apply for a part in one of their shows was irresistible.

They looked me up and down in amazement, at first, then their faces became drawn—I now know—in an air of mock solemnity, as they considered my possibilities as a quick change artist, the qualities of which I had so blatantly and ignorantly described.

"How much do you think you're worth?" Grauman, Senior, finally asked after an exchange of knowing nods with his son.

"Ten dollars a week is the least I'll work for," I ventured, afraid that I might be fixing too high a figure.

"What?" They cried in unison. "Ten dollars a week! Your act must be good!"

"It certainly is," I assured them. "It is a marvelous act!" And there I stopped, paralyzed with the fear that they might call on me for a tryout, then and there.

Princely Salary

They stepped to one side and debated long and earnestly in husky whispers. My heart was standing still. Maybe they were going to engage me—and at my own figure. Ten dollars a week. Heavens! Why, in no time at all I would be wealthy.

"All right, Rose La France"—I had introduced myself by my favorite name in the interim—"suppose you leave your address. We'll telephone you when we're ready," Sid assured. "And, by the way, you know, we never pay less than forty dollars a week."

"And I'm engaged?" I finally spluttered, breathlessly.

"Certainly," he declared. "After we send for you."

I flew home fairly in a state of delirium. I had a job on the stage. I was in actuality Rose La France, Rose La France, the quick change artist. At forty a week. Forty dollars a week. I never had dreamed of such a munificent sum.

When I entered the hallway of our home I was treading the pathway of the stars. My exhilarated spirits glorified its dingy drabness into the corridors of a palace. Should I tell my mother of our unexpected good fortune? Or should I wait? I decided on the latter course.

The greater the surprise, I figured, the more infinite the joy—when the summons came. And, I felt that it was coming soon. Even then, probably, the Graumans were mapping out my career.

Then, I suddenly thudded to earth. On our old-fashioned hall rack, side by side with my father's black derby, hung a strange hat.

The sight of my father's hat there in mid-afternoon, when he usually was at his office, alone was disturbing. But this other hat, so stiff, so black, so funereal in appearance. It spelled disaster.

Father Stricken

For some time my father had been gradually growing worse. The pain caused by his rheumatism had dragged him down physically, yet he had doggedly persisted in continuing at work.

At the top of the stairs my mother appeared, gazing down in an agitated manner. Her haggard face left nothing to my imagination.

"What is the matter, mother?" I gasped, as I sped up to comfort her. "Is papa dead?"

"No," she replied. "But he is very badly off. The doctor is with him. He may never get around again."

I knew what this meant. My father was virtually through with life. I had realized this dimly for months. He might linger indefinitely, as he did, in great physical suffering, but his active days were over.

Even this fore-knowledge, now that the inevitable had arrived, failed to serve as a buffer against the shock. My father was of the recluse scholar type, prodigal on behalf of others, always supremely indifferent to material affairs, traits which have descended to me in a somewhat lessened degree.

His income was always slender. Our efforts to make both ends meet under the best of circumstances were Spartan in the extreme. And now? Our home, pitifully modest, scrupulously neat and clean, and ruled by my austerely proud Irish mother, had always hidden our poverty from our neighbors, but now it would have to become known.

Rooms Rented

"We can rent some rooms," my mother, always ready with a practical solution for every problem, reflected, after I had gone in and kissed the suffering head of the household, "but it will be very hard for us all."

"Don't worry, mother," I reassured her mysteriously, patting her cheeks, pinching her chin and kissing her. "Everything will be all right. How does forty a week sound to you?"

"Flighty," my mother said grimly, and her eyes grew moist. "Flighty as the divvil. And it is a pity you will have to leave school. I had hoped to give you a good education, but now you will have to go to work."

"Don't you worry about that," I consoled her, although I did not enlighten her as to my mysterious meaning.

* * *

Whatever instinct it was that halted my usually uncontrollable tongue that day, when my whole being cried out to comfort her, I do not know. Had I told her of my tentative engagement, her disappointment when the Graumans failed to call me would have doubled her burden.

Day by day I waited for the telephone messages that never came. And, when I received no work after days and days, I finally called them, in desperation and with a quaking heart.

After many futile attempts to reach one of the Graumans, I was cut through to the elder. Usually good-natured, he must have been ill that day, because he cut me short and hung up on me before I had finished pouring out my plea for immediate work.

I was stunned. I sat around in a daze for the rest of the day. Then my vision cleared. I was a sham, a faker and a bluffer. And the Graumans had known it from the beginning. I was a pretender and they had gotten rid of me in the easiest manner, as they would any other nuisance.

My mortification was so acute that all thoughts of the stage, for the time being, became repugnant. I began to look elsewhere for a job.

It was during this turbulent period—I was just past 14—that I had experienced, and, in mingled consternation and despair, revolted from the first rude shock of sex.

Never before had I been sex conscious. All my dreams and imaginings of men had been undefiled.

Dr. Colwell Will Present Psychiatric Project to Meeting At Harrisburg

The need for an initial appropriation to begin construction of a state psychiatric hospital for Western Pennsylvania will be discussed tomorrow by Dr. Alexander Colwell, president of the Allegheny County Medical Society, at a meeting of welfare workers in the Penn-Harris Hotel, Harrisburg. The University of Pittsburgh has offered to deed ground in Oakland if the state will build a hospital there.

The subject of a psychiatric hospital is one of three important welfare projects to be considered by the Legislature soon. The other two projects also will be discussed tomorrow. Mrs. Worthington Scranton, of Scranton, Republican national committeewoman, will outline provisions of a bill introduced by State Senator Frank J. Harris for an appropriation of $4,115,938 for mothers' assistance during the next biennium.

Dr. Charles H. Frazier, of Philadelphia, president of the Public Charities Association of Pennsylvania, will discuss the need of an appropriation of at least $10,000,000 for this biennium for state institutions caring for the insane, feeble-minded, epileptic and delinquent.

4TH WARD GIVES BENEFIT SHOW

Hundreds were turned away yesterday afternoon and last night at the benefit performance staged at the Schenley Theater by the Fourth Ward Relief Fund for the needy of the district.

The vaudeville bill was one of the most pretentious ever presented at any local benefit show with Dick Powell directing both performances. Both amateur and professional entertainers, most of them from theaters and clubs donated their services. Edward L. Flaherty was general chairman of the affair.

Other members of the committee included Councilman M. J. Muldowney, Tommy Dixon, William Miller, Thomas J. Flaherty, Senator James J. Coyne, Les Bowser, Thomas Coyne, Louis S. Jacobs, Frank Steele and John S. Ridge.

DUQUESNE HEAD GREETS AIDES

The Very Rev. Joseph J. Callahan, president of Duquesne University, will receive members of the faculty and advisory board of the university in the first presidential reception at 8:30 tonight at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association. The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of Pittsburgh and chancellor of Duquesne Nniversity, and Mayor Charles H. Kline will be present with other members of the board.

The Duquesne council of deans is in charge of the reception. The orchestra of the school of music will play. President Callahan succeeds the Very Rev. M. A. Hehir, recently named president emeritus of Duquesne, who left Pittsburgh Saturday morning to become president, at the age of 74, of the Holy Ghost College, at Cornwells Heights, Pa., near Philadelphia.

THOMAS COMES WITH OPERA

John Charles Thomas, a native Pennsylvanian, will be heard in Pittsburgh Tuesday night, February 10, when the Chicago Civic Opera Company plays "I Pagliacci" in Syria Mosque. A baritone, one of his best parts is said to be that of Tonio in "I Pagliacci."

Thomas was born in Myersdale, received his first musical training singing at Methodist camp meetings. He began his career in light opera in 1912, making his debut in grand opera, later, in Brussels. "I Pagliacci" will be sung here on the second night of the company's visit. Monday night, February 9, "Lucia di Lammermoor" is to be heard, while "Cavelleria Rusticana" will precede "I Pagliacci" Tuesday night.

Ferris Portrait Presented Yale

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—A portrait of Prof. Harry Burr Ferris, teacher of anatomy at Yale University for 40 years, has been presented the Yale School of Medicine by 631 of his former students and colleagues, it was announced today.

Real Estate

The Gribbin Company, represented by John J. McKenna, has sold for the Burk estate to William Schaffer a three-story business building and a frame duplex in Talbot avenue, Braddock, for a private consideration. The same brokers have been retained as renting agents by the new owner.

A lot 80x200 feet in Forbes street, Fourteenth Ward, has been purchased by the Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania from the Fidelity Trust Company for $35,000.

The second semester of real estate law classes, sponsored by the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, will start Monday, February 9, at the downtown division of the University of Pittsburgh. The classes will meet every Monday evening from 6 to 7:45 o'clock. The instructor is Robert W. Semenow, counsel of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board and director of the Pennsylvania Real Estate License Law.

The Porter & MacDowell Company, downtown brokers, have added to their sales staff William E. McKnight, former borough engineer of Dormont and township engineer for Mt. Lebanon. Mc-McKnight will specialize in South Hills properties.

A lot measuring 40x150 feet in New Brighton road, Ross Township has been deeded to William E. Carey by the Fidelity Trust Company for $2,600.

William A. Mitchell has sold to Stanley Zajka a lot 18x120 feet in Flowers avenue, Fifteenth Ward, for $3,600.

Black Caracul Coats

At Special Late-Winter Prices

$200 $300 $400

Now is the time to have a beautiful black caracul coat. . . . Now, when fine, flat Russian caraculs are selling at much less even than the regular figures of this unusually low-priced fur season!

The coats are all new, semi-fitted models with large, flattering collars of self fur. In a range of women's and misses' sizes, 14 to 44.

. . . Horne's, Second Floor . . .

The Suit Season Opens at Horne's

It is no mere preliminary showing either, for Horne's always goes in for suits whole-heartedly. And even this early, we show all the outstanding features of the new suit mode for spring.

—Formal suits with fur-banded sleeves, and with fur-edged cape collars according to Martial et Armand.

—Suits in the hazy new grays, the vital new tans, the vibrant blues and brighter navies, subtle red shades, lovely, grayed greens, and stark black-and-white.

—Suits for women and misses, at a long list of prices from $39.50 to $125.

Better Furniture At Lower Prices

The February Sale Message

This is the year to buy furniture. There has not been a time, in the memory of the present organization, when such correctly designed, such well-made and beautiful furniture was available at such low prices. Coupled with the new low level of furniture prices, the February Sale offers still greater savings.

Every piece of furniture in the sale is an authentic adaptation of a period design and is displayed in connection with all other furniture of the same period. It's easy and pleasurable to ensemble the correct types of furniture for any room in the home.

February Sale Furniture may be purchased four ways—cash, charge, hold-for-future delivery or convenient monthly payments.

Typical of the English 18th Century Group

Sofa, $130.00 Chair, $65.00
Table, $25.00

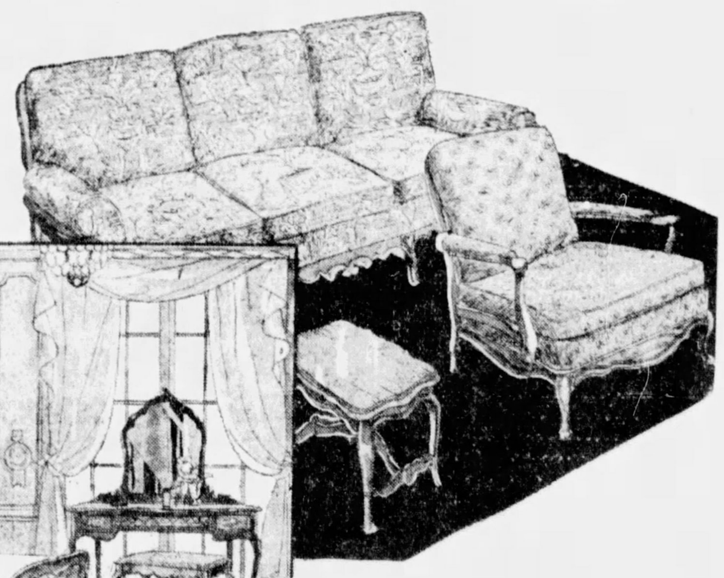
The graceful charm of this Heppelwhite dining room is well suited to the modern room. These pieces of walnut with matched fronts, may be purchased in suite or separately.

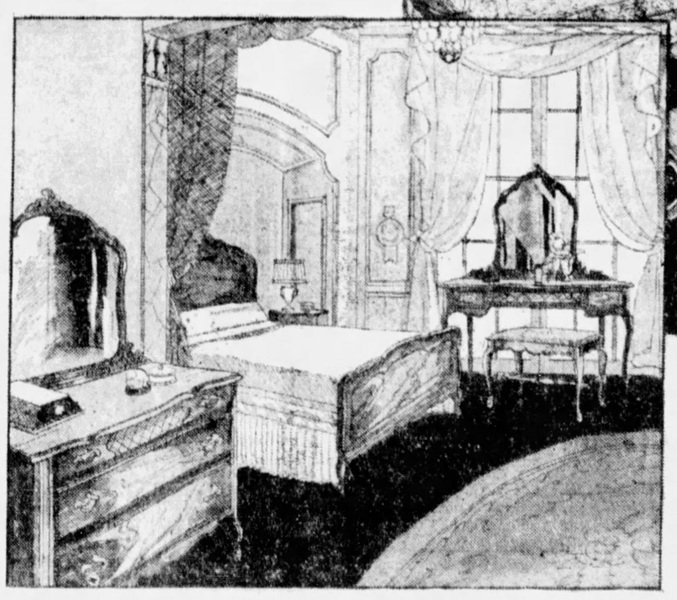
Buffet, $50.00 Server, $25.00
Table, $50.00 Armchair, $15.00
China, $45.00 Side Chair, $10.00

Typical of the French Provincial Group

Furniture with a homey atmosphere—sturdy peasant maple and homespun type of upholstery are the characteristics of this period.

Sofa, $235.00 Chair, $85.00
Coffee Table, $14.50





A French Provincial Bedroom would make insomnia a pleasure, for the graceful, flowing lines of the furniture and the interesting criss-cross decoration are always beautiful and pleasing.

Bed, $50.00 Dresser, $110.00
Dressing Table, $60 Chest, $75

REVIEWS OF NEW BILLS COMBINED WITH NEWS OF HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM

William Powell Deserts Underworld in His Newest Film

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 2.

Leaving the underworld far behind, William Powell will have a Dutch East Indies background for his first Warner Brothers talkie, "Heat Wave."

When the production gets under way on March 15, Roland Pertwee, author of the story, will be in Hollywood to aid in bringing it to the screen.

An added novelty is attached to "Heat Wave." For the first time in history a picture will be started simultaneously with the appearance of the story in dramatic form on Broadway. Basil Rathbone will have the Powell role on the stage.

William Powell

ETHEL BARRYMORE'S SON

John Drew Colt, son of Ethel Barrymore, made his first stage appearance Thursday night in Chicago, when he took a blackface role in his mother's play, "Scarlet Sister Mary."

LATEST GOSSIP

It's strongly rumored about here that Pathe's two exiles, C. B. Derr and Charles Sullivan, will produce in the near future at United Artists. "Holiday" and "Her Man" ought to insure them a berth somewhere. . . . John Cromwell, actor director and husband of one of Hollywood's better actresses, Kay Johnson, has a new claim to distinction. He's invented a card game. It is similar to rummy but faster. You match cards and suits are stuck with what's left in your hand. . . . Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has a new pet, a kinkajou, which the Messrs. Funk and Wagnalls lucidly describe as a "nocturnal, arboreal carnivore." . . . Frederick Kerr, the English actor who's out here for Pathe, recently has completed his fiftieth year on the stage. His career has been spent in commuting between New York, London and, lately, Hollywood. He has made 28 round trips across the Atlantic and has played in practically every large city in this country.

MORE WORK FOR MARY

It develops that Mary Brian will go back to Westerns. Her first emotional role in "The Royal Family of Broadway" impressed a lot of us, but the fans still like to see Mary as leading woman to Dick Arlen and Jack Oakie. She'll be the girl in "The Dude Ranch," which is Oakie's next comedy.

Mary Brian

Memories of other days are recalled by a photograph album in the possession of Clarence Bull, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. In its pages are portraits of players who have died since Bull began his photographic career in 1916.

Included are Sidney Ainsworth (heavy), Lon Chaney, Edward Connelly, Frank Currier, Florence Deshow, Casson Ferguson, Barbara La Marr, Kay Laurell, William Lewis, Marcus Loew, Robert McKim, Mabel Normand, tragic little Lucille Rickson, Theodore Roberts, Alma Rubens, Milton Sills, Ethel Gray Terry, Olive Thomas and many others.

The owner of this melancholy collection is one of the veteran still-photographers in Hollywood. He averages 25 portraits a day and has taken as high as 300 when stars like Greta Garbo come in at the end of a picture and devote a whole day to sittings.

Dramatic

Helen Vinson has a prominent role in support of Philip Merrivale, who comes next week to the Alvin in the dramatic comedy, "Death Takes a Holiday."

Aid to Oversee West View Play

The Ladies Aid Society of the West View Methodist Episcopal Church will have charge of an entertainment to be given in the church rooms Wednesday night by the Duquesne Light Company.

HERO O'BRIEN TAMES WILD ANIMALS AND MEN IN HARRIS

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Fair Warning," based on Max Brand's novel, "Untamed," is the new screen feature in the Harris. It is a great big dose of Western melodrama about one Whistling Dan, who tames wild animals with kind words and bad men with chunks of whizzing lead. He can shoot holes through silver dollars flung in the air with the nonchalance of a master of ceremonies cutting capers. The Anti-Saloon League will approve of him because he doesn't drink.

And, of course, there is a rich ranch owner's daughter who loves him. She falls into the clutches of the bad men. But you know right away how it all will turn out. It is just a question of how much galloping and shooting there will be before Justice and Love are triumphant.

Five acts of vaudeville are on the stage. A group of Negro entertainers dance and sing. A couple of hokum orators get by with some small time stuff. Bob Carter and the four Aalbu Sisters have a pleasant act of music, dance and nonsense. There's a juggler who performs with hoops and tenpins.

Things I Never Knew Till Now
(But which you knew all along!)

That if Adam had been a wireless operator and had sent out an SOS, it would not have reached the nearest star yet.

That there are more autos in the world than telephones.

That in Newark, N. J., it is against the law to sell "art" mags containing nude photos, but it is all right on a stage.

That when the flag is lowered at half-mast on a building, it is not half-mast—it is half-staff. Half-mast only on a ship.

That if you are visiting someone's home in Mexico, and you admire something in the house, they give it to you.

That the Fox Films people are said to have put a print of "Just Imagine" in a vault, to keep it there until 1980, in order to see how many things predicted in that picture come true.

That the Missouri River is the largest in the world. Yeah, even bigger than the Mississippi or the Amazon.

That there are 13,480 different colors! ! ! !

That the title and the song of "Dixie" do not relate to the South at all, but to little old New York.

That Einstein, in his first job as professor, could only get two students to sign for his classes.

That Cleopatra never dissolved a pearl in vinegar and drank it down, because only a powerful acid can dissolve a pearl quickly, and such a liquid cannot be swallowed.

That hot water beat the Merrimac during the Merrimac-Monitor battle. A fire hose was hooked up to the Monitor's boiler and when the ships got close enough the enemy gun crew was drenched in boiling aqua! Any other queries?

That the first professional songwriter was Thomas Campion, who lived from 1567 to 1620.

That quinine, which is excellent for fevers and such, was donated to civilization by the Peruvian savages.

That Charles I never laughed—that King Philip, of Spain, never smiled and that King George ran errands for Beau Brummel.

That the pistol derives its name from Pistola, Italy, where pistols first were manufactured. See any large Dictionary, then.

That platinum is the heaviest of all metals.

The Blue Laws are not so-called because of their depressive nature, but because the first of them were published on blue paper.

That the letter "R" (as a Roman numeral) stands for 80.

That when sky-writers work in the sky they write backwards.

That another reason why most night clubs should be closed is that every time you start to eat, the lights are doused to please the vanity of a second-rate ballad singer, who simply must have a spotlight.

That while pictures by electrical transcription are comparatively new, the initial step was made by Alex Bain in 1842.

That Ramon Navarro's real tag is Ramon Gil Samoniegos and the courts allowed the change because people called him "Salmon Eggs."

That too many people waste a lotta time trying to even things with their enemies instead of squaring things with them.

That the wise man and the fool, according to Kessinger's Review, are alike when they fall in love, or try to explain hard times.

And that the short history of the last two years is: Show-Off—Show Down and Shown Up!

Dam, Noted Gotham Hotel Builder, Dies

Dam, once proprietor of the old Astor House and the Union Square Hotel, built and operated the Hotel Dam at Fifteenth street and Fourth avenue. He was also one of a group who sponsored the first appearance in this country of Adelina Patti.

FUN, SONG AND DANCE ARE SERVED IN NEW DAVIS BILL

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Larry Rich and his "Pests" run away with the new vaudeville bill in the Davis. Larry employs his one-eighth ton of beef mostly in the capacity of ceremonial maestro, and his act is a big hit—ha, ha. However, comma, Rich is not the whole act—not by a pretty busy stageful! Others must represent the "Pests," who dart in and out of the scene seemingly only to annoy Larry, but really to generate laughs, which they do—plenty.

The performers include a curly-haired harmonica and xylophone player, pianist, feminine vocalist, ditto dancer with blue eyes and the cutest smile, an expert whittler and a lass whose only duty is to stick her head around a corner frequently and say "look at the funny fat man." They're all infected with Rich's goofy madness and they make loads of fun.

CHARACTER SONGS

Nan Halperin, character singer, gives the bill the artistic touch. She vocally depicts the little girl who is determined to be a "shady lady." Lucrezia Borgia, who is equally decided to put poison into the tea of certain persons, to which the audience sympathetically agrees to be co-conspirators, and a Hahlem Cleopatra, who first "gets hot" and then tragic. It is well done, of course—Miss Halperin, you know.

HOOFING BOYS

Other acts include the Rythm Boys, colored lads who do their rythmitics with their pedal extremities. How they do hoot it! Pantomime comedy is the offering of the Bryants. It is well received, too.

The screen offering is "Other Men's Women." It is a romance of railroading, and it has in it Grant Withers, Mary Astor, Regis Toomey, a realistic depiction of the crash of a bridge under a train during a flood, and a most unconvincing story. The films include a newsreel.

Man at Lyndora Takes Own Life

BUTLER, Pa., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Samuel Lenyk, 40, slashed his throat with a penknife and razor, then hanged himself. He resided alone in Lyndora and was believed to have been despondent over ill health.

Building in State Gains 20 Per Cent

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—An increase of approximately 20 per cent in building permits in January over December was reported by the Bureau of Building Inspection.

MUSIC, MIRTH, THRILLS IN BILLS THIS WEEK

Next week's Alvin attraction will be "Death Takes a Holiday," with Philip Merrivale in the role he originated in the New York presentation of the play.

Otis Skinner will be the star in the Nixon the week of February 9, appearing in his new play, "Marius."

FIGHT RENEWED ON PYMATUNING

HARRISBURG, Feb. 2.—The Pymatuning swamp, covering a large acreage in Crawford County, may at last be reclaimed if a bill, to be presented by Senator George T. Weingarden, of New Castle, is passed.

The bill will ask $1,500,000 for a dam to furnish a reserve supply of water for the Beaver Valley in times of drought, to prevent floods and possibly to furnish water for the proposed Ohio-Erie Canal.

The appropriation, if granted, will end 40 years of effort by five counties—Butler, Lawrence, Crawford, Beaver and Mercer. T. Livingstone Kennedy, late Beaver Valley representative, began the movement nearly half a century ago. The property already has been acquired by the state, until everything is in readiness for the dam.

W. S. Reader, member of the Assembly from Beaver Falls, at a meeting of the delegation from the five counties, moved to have Senator Weingarden lead the fight for the bill.

VOTE MACHINE INJUNCTION ORDERED

held the validity of the contract deciding that the objections were non-essential and in a contract of this character could be waived by the county officials. The lower court pointed out that the bond for $100,000 given by the contractor was effective for the faithful performance of the contract.

The case was argued in the Supreme Court here on January 12.

There was no allegation of fraud or improper conduct on the part of the Allegheny County officials in the awarding of the contract. It was contended that in the awarding of the contract to the lowest bidder the county was saved more than $30,000.

VICTORY FOR GUTHRIE

The Supreme Court's decision brings victory to Francis S. Guthrie after he had lost three skirmishes in Allegheny County in his attempt to enjoin the County Commissioners from contracting with the Poole Engineering and Machine Company. Judge James R. Macfarlane had refused Guthrie a preliminary injunction and objections to Judge Macfarlane's decision had been overruled by other jurists.

The contract for vote machines was awarded the Poole Company last August 21 on its bid of $1,120 per machine. The unsuccessful bidder was the Automatic Voting Machine Company of Jamestown, N. Y. which bid $1,154.82.

As a result of this decision, attorneys pointed out, it will be necessary to repeat all the legal motions before vote machines can be installed here. Bids will have to be re-advertised and the contract awarded again.

The Supreme Court's decision was received here with various emotions by those interested in the case. Following are comments by some of those who played parts in the suit:

C. F. C. ARENSBERG, counsel for Francis S. Guthrie—I am glad to hear the news; it certainly justifies Mr. Guthrie's position in the matter.

MORTIMER B. LESHER, county solicitor—Until I see the decision, I do not care to make any statement. However, if the court has so ruled, it means re-advertising for bids.

HIRAM D. HIRSH, counsel for the the Poole Company—The questions involved were technical, but they were close questions of law.

FRANCIS S. GUTHRIE, who filed the suit—I rather expected it. My original opinion that the contract was illegal has been confirmed.

ROBERT G. WOODSIDE, controller—The court's action justified the position I took. I refused to make any payments on the contract until the court action had been finally decided.

SHUSH. NOT SO LOUD.

That faro game in the Middle West may mean the renaissance of big business among the neighbor's children.

We thought that faro had been awarded the telephone booth of honor in the Smithsonian Institute.

But a couple of the we-boys dug it up and knocked a friend off for 50 grand. That ain't hay.

It was the old gag of five-will-get-you-ten. And the hand is not only quicker than the eye, but we will also spot you a pair of grandma's spectacles.

It's been many a day since Steamboat Charlie came sailing around the bend with his feather-edge shuffle working all smooth and even like a beaver's front teeth.

But if the bars are down and the boys are going to be allowed to make their pitches we apply for the three-card monte concession in the lobby of the League of Nations.

The wire-tapping privilege ain't bad either. But it interferes with investigations.

The experts who deal seconds and thirds are on the make again. We are also going to trot out the roulette wheel with so many wires on it that it looks like the bottom of a player piano.

It's about time for Damon Runyon's story about the man who was warned about the slippery dice game.

A friend told him the racket was as crooked as harness on a camel.

He said: "I know it. But it's the only game in town."

Maybe the scientists are right about people liking to be cheated. There's a thrill in it comparable only to smacking yourself on the head with a tack hammer.

If it is all right to go about putting the bite on weed benders then this is going to be an o. k. winter and an early spring.

Farmers in Canada Spurn Song for King

SASKATOON, Saskatchewan, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Farmers at Steeldale, Saskatchewan, in a "secessionist meeting" called by the Farmers' Unity League, refused to sign "God Save the King" and substituted "The Internationale." The red flag was prominently displayed in a sketch, "Labor vs. Capital," given at the meeting. Police were present as observers.

GETS YEAR FOR STAMP FRAUD

Robert E. Chizum, McKeesport, indicted last Thursday for using the mails to defraud, today pleaded guilty before Judge R. M. Gibson in Federal Court and was sentenced to a year in the federal penitentiary.

Chizum, a stamp collector, is alleged to have written to dealers in rare stamps throughout the country, using the alias of Dr. Casper A. Wallberg, and the address of a Forbes street candy store where Carnegie Tech and Pitt students received mail, requesting stamps on approval.

Through a dealer Chizum sold the collection to M. G. Hanna, Wood street dealer in rare stamps, who understood the stamps to represent a private collection. The stamps, valued at $6,000, were sold for $500.

GANDHI RENEWS CAMPAIGN

BOMBAY, Feb. 2.—(INS.)—The civil disobedience campaign in India was given renewed impetus today.

Mahatma Gandhi, India's "holy man," and his disciples, comprising the working committee of the All India Congress, meeting in Allahabad, decided unanimously that the campaign must be continued until further orders.

Thus was the olive branch proffered by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald in the form of a promise of eventual qualified dominion status for the Indian continent, brushed aside.

Illegal manufacture of salt to evade the salt tax, nonpayment of other taxes levied by the government of India, picketing of liquor shops and of shops selling foreign cloth will be continued.

Robbers Ransack House in East End

Squirrel Hill police are seeking thieves who yesterday entered the home of C. M. Best, of 5757 Fifth avenue, and ransacked the house. Furniture was overturned and furnishings disturbed. The owners are absent from the city and until their return tomorrow an estimate of the value of missing articles can not be made.

Children of the household, who had been left in charge, were absent from the home during the afternoon and evening. When returned they found the house had been entered by thieves who forced a rear window. They summoned police.

DOWN. . . . . into SLEEP

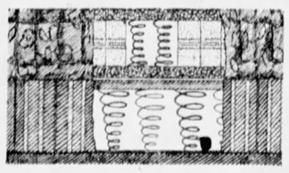
Oh, what a difference there is in beds! There's the stern kind—about as restful as a park bench. The sad type, with a dismal hollow in the center. The lumpy affair, whose mattress is like a shell-torn field.

And then there's the Statler bed . . . buoyant, restful. "What a bed!" you think, as you yawn and stretch and spread yourself in lazy content. And you grin with delight to find that the mattress is comfortable all over—that it doesn't sag in a single place, no matter how much you twist and turn—that it yields pleasantly to the curves of your body.

Finally, you switch off your radio . . . put out the light at the head of the bed . . . hunch the pillows under your shoulder . . . pull up the snowy white sheets and the blankets . . . settle down and try to remember what it was you were thinking of . . . and sink down, down, down into sleep.

In the morning you awake to find a newspaper under your door, and soon you're whistling merrily in your bath . . . eager for your breakfast.

And as you start about the business of the day, refreshed and rested and happy, we know you will think with enthusiasm of the gracious personal service you have enjoyed, of the many comforts of your room. And we fancy, too, you will remember it was the Statlers that first gave travelers the modern hotel.



Statler beds are as luxurious as money can buy. Each has a deep box spring topped by an inner-spring hair mattress . . . nothing is more conducive to restful sleep.

INDIAN THEMES FEATURE ON RADIO TONIGHT

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Of all the regular maestros among radio's hosts, only one, Walter Damrosch, explains the music of his programs. He does it not only with simplicity but with considerable charm.

What Damrosch gives is essentially musical education, but he disguises it adroitly as "music appreciation." It becomes entertainment. As a result it counts a weekly audience of 6,000,000 school children. Were it labeled "education" it would doubtless be greeted by inattentive ears.

Damrosch does not confine his music explanations to his school children period. In his Saturday night concerts, said to reach an audience of 10,000,000 adults, he takes a few minutes before each piece to remark upon its history and meaning.

* * *

There are those who do not like his manner on the microphone, who profess to detect in it a patronizing note, who would prefer him conducting to conversing. To this listening post, however, his manner is as captivating as it is sincere, and if at times there is condescension it must be borne in mind that Dawrosch is talking to people who until a year or two ago were unfamiliar with the classics.

Before the advent of radio, Damrosch conducted about 100 symphony concerts a year to audiences that totaled by the time he called it a season, some 250,000 persons. Such an experience extending over a period of 40 years should give him the right to an attitude of superiority even on the air.

* * *

At any event, he is the only musical figure, with the exception of Stokowski, who attempts to explain his radio program, though the custom is beginning to find favor with others—with Willard Robison and to a smaller extent, Vincent Lopez. There is something of the story-teller in Damrosch's style. He gives anecdotes, little pieces of human interest, tells of the origin of the selection about to be played.

With Werrenrath and Schumann-Heink, Damrosch is now devoting his entire time to radio. And radio demands that he keep alert to the spirit of the times. He does not draw a forbidding classical cloak about him and sniff at the moderns. He has a friendly ear for the newcomer. He has even given a helping hand to jazz, particularly the jazz of Gershwin and Braine. He mixes the masters with those obscure Americans who are waiting—they will have a good wait—for a nod from Toscanini.

* * *

Three stars definitely associated with the talkies possess the distinction of having been the highest-paid American artists who have been heard on the air—Al Jolson, Will Rogers, Maurice Chevalier.

The microphones continue to sound their call, and the movie stars continue to respond. Bebe Daniel has disclosed one of the best Hollywood singing voices on the air. Other screen notables heard regularly and often are Nancy Carroll, Jack Oakie, Jean Southern, Dorothy Lee, Lillian Roth. Among the stars of other days, Dolores Cassinelli is at present one of the leading radio vocalists. Even that strange phenomenon, a Hollywood premiere, has been given to the armchairs.

* * *

Not so long ago dispatch-bearers from California announced that William S. Hart was contemplating an exclusively radio career. He was once heard on the networks in a recital of the poem, "Lasca."

His appearance was not heralded by publicity, and his voice, consequently, was heard by only a scattered army of ear-cuppers.

John Barrymore has also limited his radio experience to one brief appearance—a recital of Hamlet's Soliloquy. Perhaps he is waiting until radio is on more of a speaking acquaintance with Shapespeare.

Greta Garbo and Clara Bow have also been strangely inaudible. Both, wisely, may be waiting for television.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

They say "everything comes to him who waits." After a long wait, NBC has answered our plea for more of Earle Spicer, the Saturday night baritone. Oley Speaks' "Sylvia," "Rose of My Heart" and "Toreador Song" from "Carmen" are his selections on KDKA at 9 o'clock tonight.

* * *

"The Co-eds" on WJAS at 5:30 are worthy of an evening spot.

* * *

The two most competitive hours on Monday night are 9:30 and 10:30. We wish the networks could make way for the Real Folks and Family Party at different hours. Empire Builders should get the green light at 10:30 with Willard Robinson and Don Amaizo spotted so they wouldn't conflict.

* * *

A surge of Indian atmosphere has struck the studios. Last night Francis Owen gave a picturesque description of the legend, "Land of the Sky Blue Waters" with musical background by the Owen Trio.

* * *

Tonight Don Amaizo goes hunting in the wilds of India as guest of a native prince (not Ghandi) on WJAS while the Empire Builders unfold the tale of Black Hawk, KDKA. Both at 10:30—a tough break!

* * *

Answer—No, it was an imitation by Willie Howard. Incidentally the letters pro and con on Maurice have filled our mail basket for nine days now.

* * *

Whether you like him or not, you should like his French namesake, Maurice Spitalny, who gave an artistic expression to "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" on WCAE-WTAM recently.

* * *

As interesting as reading the Wickersham report is the monotony forced upon us by local stations of listening to an announcer read the next day's program.

* * *

The more we see of Ed Lowry the more we like him. He brings Nan Halperin to the KDKA mike at 11:15 tonight.

* * *

Husk O'Hare, who does the announcing at WENR for "His Own Band," has boys of the town on pins and needles. Our he-men don't like the effeminate way he whispers into the microphone about "dreamy music of satin-like smoothness." But the girls are wild about his phraseology.

* * *

Husk thinks a lot of "His Own Band," which we learned the other night could be hired for $1,500 a sitting.

* * *

We were playing "500" in Munhall recently when our partner, Ernest McShane, bid "10 no trump" and missed it.

"Turn on Husk O'Hare!" he exclaimed, tearing his hair. "I want to get mad."

* * *

Guy Lombardo, of the Lombardos (WJAS at 10) has purchased a motor launch, which will be delivered in his back yard (the Atlantic ocean) early this spring. Guy lives at Lido Beach, Long Island.

* * *

WMBJ, whose license was turned over to William S. Walker in a recent Radio Board edict, effective Saturday, was heard on the air as usual yesterday, "operating on 1,500 kilocycles, by authority of the Federal Radio Commission."

* * *

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Those baby chicks whose "peep peep" is used as a signature by KDKA at 7:45 came near going haywire last week. The chicken feed was spilled on the floor just about the time the program came on the air. An announcer hurriedly scooped a handful of feed and threw it into the small pen, saving the day.

2 HELD AFTER CHASE ON ROOFS

An exciting chase over the rooftops of Penn avenue buildings, during which a policeman fired several shots, preceded the capture early today of two alleged prowlers in the basement of a building at 1805 Penn avenue. The prisoners, lodged in the Penn Avenue Station on suspicious person charges, said they were Anthony Rynkiewizh, 24, of 2203 Penn avenue, and John Grobowski, 23, of 1409 Penn avenue.

Mrs. Mollie Levinson, restaurant proprietor, of 1807 Penn avenue, notified police that prowlers were in her establishment. Capt. Harry Mellon and Lieut. Peter Lehney and squad responded and surrounded the block. Two men were seen to emerge from a skylight on the roof of the restaurant building.

Police followed and the men disappeared through a trap door. A few moments later they came back across the roofs to 1805 Penn avenue and ran downstairs to the basement. During the chase Patrolman William Bowman fired upon the men. They were cornered in the cellar and submitted to arrest without resistance.

Edison Heads Rabbi's List of 10 Greatest

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Rabbi Louis I. Newman has definite ideas on who are the 10 greatest living men. In his Sunday sermon before congregation Rodef Shalom he named Thomas A. Edison, Albert Einstein, Mahatma Gandhi, George Bernard Shaw, Joseph Stalin, Leon Trotzky, Benito Mussolini, Henri Bergson, Earnest Bloch and Rabindranath Tagore.

Postoffice Janitor Held in Mail Fraud

Trapped by a decoy letter, according to evidence, William S. Brown, 52, Negro janitor at the Charleroi postoffice, was held for court under $1,000 bail today by a United States Commissioner on a charge of rifling the mails. Postoffice representatives testified the decoy letter, containing $3, was found on Brown.

Copeland Defends Bakers on Prices

BALTIMORE, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, defended bakers against charges that the price of bread had not followed wheat downward, in an address today before the annual convention of the Potomac States Bakers' Association.

The criticism recently voiced in Congress, he said, was founded on "widespread lack of knowledge."

Russell Thaw Victor in Air Race

He flew against William Patterson, of Mineola from Roosevelt Field to the Newark Metropolitan Airport and return, averaging better than 120 miles an hour. Both fliers landed at Newark, had their log books signed by the operations manager, Maj. Robert Copsey, and then hopped back, Thaw finishing 11 seconds ahead.

FALSE ALARM SENDER HELD

Declaring that in the future anyone found guilty of turning in false fire alarms will be held for court, Magistrate Leo Rothenberg today held George Smith, 48, Washington street, for court at a hearing in Central Police Court.

Testifying that Smith turned in three false alarms within 12 minutes and was in the act of turning in the fourth when he was caught, Battalion Chief George Spahr pointed out that not only does each run of the fire department cost the city approximately $250, but that lives of firemen and pedestrians are endangered.

Tarentum Home Burns, Loss $10,000

Fire destroyed the 2-story frame house of Mrs. Rebecca Cooper, 77, near Tarentum, today. Valuable heirlooms were lost. The damage was estimated at $10,000.

'LOST' IN JAIL INDICTED

Mervill Queen, held in jail since October 21 without trial, was indicted this morning on a charge of larceny of an automobile five minutes after the February Grand Jury convened. The true bill was returned by Ezra A. Kirkland, 1416 Margaret street, Munhall, foreman.

Queen's incarceration without trial was said to have come about through an error in handing records by the indictment clerk in the District Attorney's office. He will be tried probably this week.

Philadelphia's Oldest Man Dies at 120 Years

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Isaac Glickman, Philadelphia's oldest resident, smoked his last cigaret, told his last joke and smilingly greeted death after more than a century of life. His age, records in his possession indicated, was 120.

His offer is that he is to be paid for this bottle after you are completely satisfied and the one taking the treatment to be the judge. Send your name and address today.

Rail Terminal Fire Darkens N. Y. Area

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Fire, burning insulation either of steam pipes or cable conduits in a tunnel connecting the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal with yards in the rear, sent out a dense smoke screen which turned day into night in the area today.

Firemen broke through a glass-vaulted sidewalk and poured water through the holes. A fireman unconscious from the smoke, was carried to safety.

Textile Strikers Refused Old Jobs

DANVILLE, Va., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Crowds of former strikers swarmed about the employment offices of the Dan River and Riverside Textile mills today in another unsuccessful effort to obtain work. Mill officials announced, as on other days last week, that there were practically no vacancies, and only a few of the more than 3,000 jobless workers were re-employed.

'Charity' Solicitor Fraud, Police Say

Accused of soliciting funds in Bellevue, Avalon, Ben Avon and Emsworth, and then pocketing the money for himself, Robert L. Billings, 34, alias R. L. Wright, was in the county jail today awaiting a hearing before Justice of the Peace Arthur Davis, of Avalon, tonight.

Billings was arrested in McKinley avenue, Avalon, by Patrolman James Parke, of Avalon police, Saturday. Police said Billings failed to give his home address, collected approximately $100 from residents of the North Boroughs, by telling them the money was for charity.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Joseph M. Belleville.

Joseph Mitchell Belleville, 80, died in his home at 535 Irwin drive, Sewickley, yesterday. He was born at Hartsville, Pa., and for more than 30 years was general traffic manager of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. In recent years he was vice president of the Missouri and Illinois Railroad Company. Mr. Belleville was one of the organizers of the National Industrial Traffic League. He was a member of the Traffic Club of Pittsburgh and the Duquesne Club. He leaves two sons, William M. Belleville, of Pittsburgh, and Norman W. Belleville, of Willows, Cal.; three daughters, Miss Edith M. Belleville, Mrs. David W. Miller and Mrs. Harry K. Hill, and seven grandchildren.

Kress Funeral.

Funeral services will be held tonight for Mrs. Mary Enscoe Kress, wife of F. J. Kress, owner of the F. J. Kress Box Company, who died in her home at 321 South Graham street, Saturday. The services will be held in the family home and burial will be private tomorrow morning in Allegheny Cemetery. Mrs. Kress was a lifelong resident of Pittsburgh and a member of the Fourth Presbyterian Church. Besides her husband she leaves a son, Paul C. Kress; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Pringle; a brother, George Enscoe; a sister, Florence Enscoe, and five grandchildren.

William Caswell.

William Caswell, 75, for 44 years a resident of Pittsburgh, died yesterday in his home at 4101 Murray avenue, Squirrel Hill. He was born at Staffordshire, England. Mr. Caswell was a member of Homestead Lodge No. 479, Knights of Pythias, and the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd. He leaves four sons, William, John, Jesse and Edward C. Caswell; four daughters, Mrs. Carrie Bright, Mrs. Alice Wilker, Mrs. Elizabeth O'Keefe and Mrs. Ann Carney; 10 grandchildren, and a great grandchild.

C. Frederick Newman.

C. Frederick Newman, baritone soloist at the Sewickley Presbyterian Church, and radio artist, died yesterday at his home, 6215 Hampton street. He attended Otterbein University and studied voice at the Boston Conservatory of Music, and for the past eight years has been connected with the C. C. Mellor Music Company. Mr. Newman was a member of the Sixth United Presbyterian Church, the Lions Club of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh Athletic Club, Alcoma Country Club, and the Masonic Order. He leaves his wife, Jean McCrory Newman, and a brother, Robert D. Newman, of West Mansfield, O.

George Kirch.

George S. Kirch, 71, veteran steel worker, died in the home of his son, Raymond J. Kirch, 4205 Calvin street, yesterday. He was a lifelong resident of Pittsburgh, and was a member of the Carnegie Steel Company Veteran's Association. He leaves two sons, Raymond and Leo J. Kirch, the latter Republican chairman of the Fifteenth Ward, and a daughter, Mrs. Elmer Mullen.

Dannhardt Funeral.

Funeral services were to be held today for Mrs. Mary Gloeckner Dannhardt, 71, widow of Peter Dannhardt, who died Thursday morning in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hilda Dannhardt Mullen, 1321 Wareman avenue. The services were to be held in the Holy Trinity Catholic Church and burial was to be in Mt. Carmel Cemetery. She was born in Germany and came to Pittsburgh 65 years ago. Besides her daughter Mrs. Dannhardt leaves two sons, George and William B. Dannhardt; a brother, Philip Gloeckner, and 14 grandchildren.

Mrs. Elizabeth Ayres.

Mrs. Elizabeth Douglas Ayres, 82, widow of Henry S. Ayres, died yesterday in her apartment in the Hotel Schenley, where she resided for several years. She formerly lived in Sharpsburg. Mrs. Ayres leaves two sons, J. Douglas and George N. Ayres, both of Pittsburgh, and a daughter, Mrs. Harry H. Willock, of Lillian, Ala.

ROBBERS REAP BIG WEEK-END HARVEST

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Mr. Pfarr

More years ago than most of us remember, the popular sport for young people and old people was square dancing. At Arion Hall on the North Side, Druiden Hall in Dutchtown (Troy Hill), Hammel's beer garden in Mt. Oliver, Mannerchor Hall in Mt. Washington, deep bass voices would boom out, "Reel away four," and the Virginia Reel would be under way.

The reel, the difficult quadrille, the still more confusing cotton, the grapevine twist and the double hook-in—these were dances or calls which set figures spinning and bumping. A good figure caller listened to the urgings of the men who wanted to cause human traffic jams.

The figure caller was more or less of a celebrity in his district, and if he was able to improve in his calls, his fame grew. "Swing the girl with the big feet," "Swing the girl you love best," "Promenade to the lemonade," "Promenade, you know where, I don't care," "The ladies swing through, the gents know how," "Birdie in the cage, two hands around"—these were calls which rang through the music of "The Arkansaw Traveler," "The Devil's Dream" or "The Irish Washerwoman."

One of the most popular of calls was "Circle four hands halfway, ladies bow under" because here the men folk gingerly put their arms about the ladies and there was a bit of a squeeze.

* * *

On the North Side the favored gathering places for square dancing were Foreman's, at West Diamond and Ohio streets; Albert Abernathy's Waldorf Hall, Henry Wagner's Washington Hall. In Perrysville, Maccabee Hall was the scene; in Dutchtown, Turner Hall, Druiden Hall and German Masonic Hall. On the South Side, old Turner Hall, in Jane street, with Mozart's and Brady's orchestra, was the attraction.

veteran mailman of the East End, was the aristocrat of callers and officiated at only the high-toned affairs. Charley (Shorty) Short, Charley Hart, Bill Lamb, Ed Endrist, Tom Brady, the fire alarm operator, Pete May, Gus (Bottlehouse) Kreil, now the steward of the Southern Club—these were figure callers remembered by Harvey (Hun) Merriman and Bill Kimberly, the Carrick resident.

Kimberly himself was a figure caller in Washington County before he moved to Pittsburgh 30 years ago. He remembers how, in the winter, two or three young men would hitch up the sled, go from home to home collecting square dancers and descend on one home, unannounced, and take possession for the evening.

The orchestra usually consisted of one fiddler, and the gentlemen each contributed 25 cents to his welfare. He earned it, too, for country square dances began at 7:30 and continued to 2 o'clock. There was seldom any liquor to be had.

* * *

The country dances were more interesting, Kimberly feels. For one thing, the calls were more complicated and the dancers anticipated the affairs with greater glee.

In those days everybody either walked to the dances or hitched up the horse. Kimberly's pride was centered in a two-wheel cart for which many a girl would have given her regular gentleman friend "the mitten," as they expressed it then.

Kimberly and his girl were going home one night from a square dance when the axle of the cart cracked and tossed both of them into the road. None too proudly, Bill and his girl mounted the horse and trotted home, deserting the crippled cart.

THREE KILLED HERE IN AUTO CRASHES

Collision on Ramp Fatal To One; Hit-Run Driver Sought by Detectives

Injuries suffered in automobile accidents in the Pittsburgh district caused the deaths of three men yesterday.

Joseph Gibbons, 23, of 1018 Kirkpatrick street, North Braddock, died in Braddock General Hospital. He was injured when an automobile in which he was a passenger truck a pole on Braddock avenue, East Pittsburgh, January 25. Ladislaw Manick, 22, of 119½ Cherry way, Braddock, was killed instantly in the crash. Others hurt in the crash are being held in the county jail. The car was said to have been stolen.

Paul Foight, 24, of Export, died in Columbia Hospital yesterday from injuries suffered when his automobile hit a pole at the William Penn highway and the Greensburg Pike Friday. His skull was fractured.

County detectives today were seeking a hit-and-run driver who disappeared after his automobile killed Roy Mowder, 20, of Glenwillard, on the Beaver road, near Wireton, late Saturday.

Edward Emmert, 22, of 1533 Broadhead street, is in Allegheny General Hospital with a probable skull fracture suffered early yesterday when an automobile he was driving upset after crashing into the railing of the Manchester Bridge ramp in Duquesne way. His three companions, Joseph O'Connor, 22, of 7207 Somerset street; Edward Roche, 22, of 7249 Gladfield street, and Jerome Wendell, 21, of 6830 Lemington avenue, were cut and bruised.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 2.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Senate argued Saturday on prohibition, so there must have been some pretty important business before them. They argue over the dry law at the busiest times. Soldiers are trying to get a part cash payment on their government compensation, but Mr. Mellon says that would upset the bond market and cause government interest rates to rise. You owe the government something and see if they worry how much interest you got to pay them. Mr. Mellon is going to have that budget balanced if he has to join Al Capone's gang to do it. Yours, WILL.

Pershing Reveals Allies Periled by Pleas of Pacifists

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING,

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces.

CHAPTER XXII.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

An American mission headed by Col. E. M. House arrived in France toward the end of November for an Inter-Allied conference. Other members of the mission were Admiral W. S. Benson, Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, Chief of Staff; Oscar T. Crosby for the Treasury Department; Vance McCormick, chairman of the War Trade Board; Bainbridge Colby, Shipping Board; Alonzo E. Taylor, Thomas N. Perkins, War Industries, and Paul Cravath.

This conference had been planned before the meeting of prime ministers at Rapallo which brought the Supreme War Council into existence. It was one of those assemblies of Allied representatives held occasionally for the discussion of problems of common interest concerning the conduct of the war. Its purpose in the present instance was to consider the most efficient means by which the resources in men and materials of Allied countries, including the United States, could be utilized.

Gen. Pershing

In an early, informal discussion with Mr. House and Gen. Bliss I gave them an outline of our situation, our relations with the Allies, the progress of our plans, and put them before our urgent ned for men and material of all sorts.

As the representatives of different nationalities gathered in Paris recent reports of decreasing losses of ocean tonnage and greater destruction of German submarines, with prospects of still further improvement, seemed to give more of hopefulness in the general situation, and Allied spirits were somewhat revived.

New Hopefulness

The British had won at Cambrai and were making satisfactory progress in their advance on Jerusalem, which, it was said, would be facilitated by the use of their new base at Jaffa. The Italians seemed to have recovered their morale to a limited extent, with the stiffening of their lines by British and French divisions, and had successfully held their own against the Austrian attack on the Piave.

In Switzerland the economic concessions by the United States as to cotton and credits were hailed with satisfaction, which,

VET DEFENDS SHOOTING

Angered because John Stawosky, 44, of Creestone, near Castle Shannon, was elected president of the Polish Falcon Club yesterday, despite the fact he could not speak English, a South American, Jaman Jacques, 37, of House 108, Mine 3, of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company at Mollenauer, shot Stawosky, police say, then calmly went home to sleep.

He was arrested this morning in bed by county detectives, who say he admitted the shooting.

Police reported Jacques as saying:

"I'm from Lineres, Chile. I served as a volunteer during the World War. Stawosky was always talking against America. I told him to go back where he came from if he didn't like it here. I thought I should defend my adopted country."

Discount Time Limit For Taxes Expires

Collection of city, school and water taxes was begun today at face value by City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, to continue until April 1. The two per cent discount period effective from January 2 ied Saturday. Record business was reported.

After April 1, the taxes will automatically become delinquent and a two per cent penalty, plus one-half per cent monthly interest carrying charge will be added, Schooley said. Since January more than $8,000,000 has been collected.

Officer Hunts Fight, Cycle Wires Severed

Summoned to halt a reported fight at the rear of the Arlington Apartments, South Aiken avenue, early this morning, Motorcycle Patrolman Edward J. Sweeney, of Squirrel Hill Police Station, responded. Sweeney found nobody there. He went into the apartment to seek information about the phone call from J. C. O'Leary, night operator. When he returned he found all the ignition wires had been pulled from his motorcycle.

OFFICIAL FUNDS FOR JOB AID CONDEMNED

County Unemployment Board Says Relief Obligation Lies With Employers, Employes

City, county and state funds no longer should be looked upon as a means of providing relief in the existing unemployment situation, declared the Allegheny Unemployment Committee, which organized today as part of the statewide program of Gov. Pinchot, in a resolution it adopted.

The committee, meeting for the first time at a luncheon in Kaufmann's department store, indorsed and praised the plan of the Allegheny County emergency committee for relief measures and for the eventual elimination of the unemployment problem by providing work instead of granting doles.

'UP TO EMPLOYERS, MEN'

Its resolution, announced by its chairman, Edgar J. Kaufmann, will be followed by a report to Clyde King, secretary of revenue at Harrisburg, head of the Pinchot program.

The obligation of providing relief and finding a remedy for the unemployment situation belongs to the employers and employes of the country, the unemployment committee asserted.

A comprehensive program for present relief and to ultimately return the unemployed to work is under formulation by the emergency committee, and is expected to be announced tomorrow.

The group of leading employers of the district forming the emergency committee is now collecting a fund.

CENTRALIZED DIRECTION

The action today by the unemployment committee indicates that all measures will be centralized under the direction of the emergency committee of employers.

Mr. Kaufmann, who is also a member of the emergency committee, submitted to the unemployment committee a statement showing the aims and the program of the emergency committee. The unemployment committee elected Joseph C. Trees vice chairman and John Ihleder secretary.

Following the meeting, Mr. Kaufmann said:

"A resolution was adopted at the conclusion of the reports commending and praising the action of the employers of Allegheny County in taking the stand that city, county and state funds no longer should be looked upon as a means of providing relief. In view of this resolution, the Allegheny County Unemployment Committee is reporting to Clyde King, its chairman, in Harrisburg, that it is in hearty sympathy with this movement and is ready to serve in any capacity with the local emergency committee's desires."

The $3,300,000 program of public improvements planned by the city is one move to meet the problem. The 99 projects planned to be initiated before April 1, will employ 2,600 men at least five months, according to estimates.

SHOOTS 97 OUT OF 100!

MISS "LIBBY" LILLEY . . . CAPTAINS TECH'S CO-ED RIFLEERS

Miss Lilley, Chicago girl who was afraid of a gun until she went to Carnegie Tech. She now shoots 97 out of a possible 100!

CO-EDS AT TECH GOOD SHOTS

A girl from Chicago who was afraid of a gun has been found in Pittsburgh. At least she used to be afraid of a gun. Now she is captain of the women's rifle team at Margaret Morrison, Carnegie Tech, and has a shooting average of 97 out of a possible 100. Her name is "Libby" Lilley and her motto is:

"Go out for rifle, and never fear the racketeer!"

There are 10 pretty co-ed sharpshooters on the Tech team. Virginia Artz, Ruth Mitchell, Jane Myers, Mary Husband, Elizabeth Lilley, Bernice Converse, Floy Sample, Eleanor Duffy, Doris Mather, Ruth Brooks, Kitty Mong and Leah Voegtly all have shooting averages ranging from 93 to 98.

Beginning February 21, the girls' team will shoot in competition with rifle teams from other colleges.

Sale of Drinks Drops in London

LONDON.—(AP)—Hard times seem to have made economy popular—even in champagne. A fashionable supper restaurant reports that it rarely sells 140 bottles of champagne to late diners now, while it sold an average of 400 bottles a year or so ago.

Jobless Man Found, Suicide, in Woods

Missing since Friday, John Sauers, 57, of 7 Gregg street, Glendale, was found a suicide in a wooded section of Butcher's Hill, Collier Township. Joseph Steinberg, of 618 Sixth avenue, Carnegie, discovered the body yesterday, according to the coroner's report.

Ministerial Union Hears Graham Today

United States Attorney Louis E. Graham was to speak today to the Ministerial Union of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County at the bimonthly meeting in the Smithfield Street Methodist Episcopal Church. He was invited to interpret the Wickersham report "from the legal standpoint."

LOOT TOTALS THOUSANDS IN CITY

Bandits, Burglars Active; Fifth Avenue Holdup Man Under Guard in Hospital

Bandits and burglars who operated throughout the city over the week-end obtained loot amounting to several thousand dollars.

An alleged robber captured after shooting the proprietor of a diamond shop in the Aronson Building, Fifth avenue, Saturday was under police guard in the Allegheny General Hospital today. First giving his name as J. P. Leonard, of Akron, O., he later told police his right name was John F. Weinsickle, 28, of Bellevue road, East Bellevue.

GAS STATIONS HELD UP

Armed with a nickel-plated revolver, a bandit held up two gasoline stations in the East End within 30 minutes last night.

CLEANER ROBBED

Louis Schwartz, proprietor of a cleaning establishment at 1805 Center avenue, was forced into a closet by two armed men who looted the establishment of $970 and escaped.

Two men held up Edward Swody, of 2460 Charles street, near his home early yesterday and robbed him of $225.

LYCEUM ROOMS LOOTED

A radio valued at $68 and cigarets valued at $6 were stolen from St. Nicholas Lyceum, at 1326 East Ohio street, early yesterday.

E. G. Jenkins, of 207 North Dithridge street, reported to police that his overcoat, valued at $90, was stolen while he was attending services in the First Presbyterian Church.

Clothing, jewelry and silverware valued at $2,000 was stolen from the home of C. W. Zey, at 6316 Jackson street, by burglars who jimmied a rear window.

Police Visit New York; Study Traffic School

Five policemen, the city engineer and a representative of the Better Traffic Committee were in New York today, looking over the New York police school for pointers that will be helpful in starting a similar training school here. The police officers will remain in New York four days, acquainting themselves with the school system, so that when the local school is established they can be utilized as instructors.

Those in the party which left last night were Frank L. Duggan and Leo Lehman, of the Better Traffic Committee, which is financing the trip; City Traffic Engineer Louis W. McIntyre, Assistant Superintendent of Police Ben Marshall, Traffic Inspector Jacob Dorsey, Traffic Lieutenant A. L. Jacks, Motorcycle Patrolman Bert Keller and Mounted Policeman Charles L. Dye.

FLAMES SWEEP 7 WOODS RUN BUILDINGS

Policeman Collapses After Carrying Out Victim; Dormont Blaze Sifted

A 2-year-old girl and a blind man were carried to safety in fires which swept their homes yesterday and last night. The child, Beatrice Gross, was saved by her father, Albert Gross, when fire broke out in the basement of a three-story apartment house at 827 North Sheridan avenue.

The blind man, Lee Battle, was rescued by Police Lieut. Robert McIntosh, who carried him from a burning dwelling in Spruce street, Woods Run, yesterday.

RESCUER COLLAPSES

Mr. Gross discovered the fire through smoke in his second-floor apartment last night. Joseph Shorr and his family, occupants of the first floor, were absent at the time, as were Sherman Shapiro and his wife, who live on the third floor.

The flames reached the first floor, causing damage estimated by Battalion Chief Fred S. Beckett at $3,000. Traffic was tied up more than an hour.

In the Woods Run fire seven three-story frame dwellings were burned. Battle, rescued by Lieut. McIntosh, resided with his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ella Battle.

After carrying Battle to the street, Lieut. McIntosh collapsed. Hoseman Maximilian Schuler, of No. 45 Engine Company, stepped on a nail as he fought the blaze. He was treated at St. John's Hospital.

$10,000 LOSS

Four of the dwellings were vacant. Besides the Battle home, the other tenanted houses were occupied by McKinley Hughes and Albert Weathersby. Battalion Chief Martin Loebig estimated damage at $10,000.

ALLIANCE FIRE LOSS $500,000

ALLIANCE, O., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—The Spring Holswarth department store was destroyed by fire and several nearby buildings damaged early Sunday. Firemen estimated loss at $500,000.

The store operated by Marshal Field & Co. was enveloped in flames when an alarm was sounded. When the fire department arrived the flames were beyond control.

Apparatus was summoned from Canton and Sebring and the flames were brought under control after a two-hour fight. Firemen expressed belief the fire started from defective wiring.

Engineer 48 Years Quits, Record Clear

HAVANA FAILS TO SEE WALES

HAVANA, Feb. 2.—(INS.)—Several thousand residents of Havana were disappointed because they failed to catch a glimpse of the Prince of Wales when he spent five hours in Havana harbor yesterday aboard the liner Oropesa.

The Oropesa dropped anchor at 6:30 yesterday morning. Hundreds of Cubans and tourists lined the sea wall while others scurried around the British liner in small boats, all eager to see the heir to the British throne.

The prince and his youngest brother, Prince George, were greeted officially on board by the British minister, Thomas J. Morris, by the Cuban secretary of state, Francisco M. Fernandez, and by a personal representative of President Machado.

Railway Man to Sail For Russian Post

G. A. Gill, superintendent of motive power of the Eastern Lines, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, will sail from New York next week to take up his new duties as chief consulting engineer of the government operated railroad system of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. He has been granted a year's leave of absence to accept the position in Russia. He will go first to Berlin for a brief study of the German railroad operation before taking up his duties in Moscow.

Odd Fellows to Hear New Grand Master

Webster Grimm, newly elected grand master of Pennsylvania, I. O. O. F., will address local Odd Fellows the night of February 11 at Western Star Lodge, North Side. The following night he will address members of Sheridan Lodge. Grimm succeeds George McDowell, of Pitcairn, as grand master.

THE BEST WAY TO AVOID INFLUENZA

1. Avoid crowded cars; public meeting places; warm, stuffy rooms.
2. Beware of coughers and sneezers. Breathe through the nose.
3. Build up your alkaline reserve by eating citrus fruits and taking ACIDINE, the most effective antiacid of which we know. ACIDINE will keep the bowels active and reduce acidity. The resulting alkaline reserve will build up resistance to colds.
4. Avoid catching cold. Take ACIDINE at the first sign of a cold. Take ACIDINE every hour in hot water, if you have a cold. ACIDINE can be obtained at any drug store.
5. At first sign of chill, fever, cough, sore throat or head cold call your doctor at once.

"I am so happy . . that the last pimple is gone"

You, too, may be proud of a clear skin!

A CLEAR SKIN, and of even greater value to you—a strong organic vitality—comes only with the right number of red-blood-cells.

Whatever treatment you may use for your complexion, remember the important fact that natural beauty—a clear skin and a rose-petal complexion comes from within.

More red-blood-cells and of the right quality! That's the answer to a sallow complexion and to pimples and boils. The way to regain the red-blood-cells is to take S.S.S.—the tonic that will help Nature build up and enrich your blood. Your skin will clear up! Your whole body will be strengthened, invigorated!

When you take S.S.S. to get rid of these outside blemishes, you are building up the system to ward off the graver diseases of which these blemishes are Nature's warning.

Blood is life! You cannot count your own red-blood-cells—that is technical! But you should know that they are the "ships" that sail in the blood and carry nourishment to all parts of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues.

You can recognize a lowered count by the way you look and feel—such as body weakness, lack of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, boils and pimples. They may indicate that you need S.S.S.

Pimples and blackheads disappeared

Mrs. Mary E. Parker, Bahama, N. C., writes: "Because of a rundown condition my appetite was poor. I felt tired in the mornings and was troubled with pimples and blackheads. Red bumps came on my face once or twice monthly. After taking S.S.S. the pimples and blackheads disappeared and my skin became clear. I do not feel tired upon rising in the mornings. I had tried a number of medicines but S.S.S. is the one that helped me."

Complexion cleared up beautifully

Miss Mary Rauk, Clearwater, N. Y., writes: "My face was blemished with many pimples. No treatment I used did them any good. I also had boils. My appetite was poor. My weight was off and I felt nervous. After taking S.S.S. my complexion cleared up beautifully. My appetite improved. I now rest well at night and am greatly benefited in every way. Because S.S.S. helped me I think it is the best blood medicine!"

OLD GOLD SPILLS THE BEANS IN BOSTON

Upsets rival brands with Sweeping Victory . . . in Ripley's latest Taste-Test

They held another "tea-party" at Boston the other day. "Down with the tyranny of habit!" was the cry. "Let's find out which cigarette really tastes the best."

From Back-Bay to the Fishing Docks, it was another Boston rebellion. Throwing brand prejudice overboard . . . more than a thousand Boston smokers compared the four leading cigarettes, with the brand names hidden.

They didn't know which was which. They didn't care. All they wanted was to pick out the best tasting cigarette.

At Lexington . . . modern Minute Men needed hardly a minute to give O. G. a 2 to 1 victory. At Bunker Hill, OLD GOLD'S cool, throat-easy quality completely routed the enemy.

"No taxation without representation" . . . said the Boston of long ago. "No throat-tax . . . and unlimited smoking joy," says the Boston of today.

TWO GRILLED IN MYSTERIOUS ROSS TOWNSHIP SLAYING

POLICE DOUBT GANG-ATTACK STORY

County detectives today continued questioning two suspects in an effort to clear up the fatal shooting of Walter A. Thompson, 31, of 814 Madison avenue, known as the "Greaser," early yesterday in the home of Adolph H. Giger, Jacks Run road, Ross township.

Giger and Emil Schoen, of 44 East Orchard avenue, Bellevue, were taken from jail this morning to detective headquarters, where they were to make a formal statement.

DOUBT SUSPECTS' STORY

Detectives said they discredited the early story told by Giger and Schoen—that Thompson and a gang invaded the house and partly wrecked the place before the shooting took place.

The only evidence of disorder in the house, the sleuths said, was a broken glass in a china cabinet in the dining room.

The detectives say they believe Thompson went to the Giger house alone, started to kick down the door and was shot as he was about to break in.

HINT GUNS "PLANTED"

Schoen owned the house where Giger lived.

Bad feeling had existed between Giger and Thompson, the sleuths reported. They said Giger beat Thompson last Tuesday in a dive in East Ohio street. They believe Thompson went to Giger's home to get revenge, when he was slain.

Man Awaits Hearing On Liquor Charge

Accused of transportation and possession of liquor, Herman Hall, 30, a Negro, of 630 New Brighton road, Avalon, today was in the county jail pending a hearing before Justice of the Peace Arthur Davis, of Avalon, tomorrow. Chief Louis F. Luckan and Patrolman Arthur Hallewell, of Avalon police, arrested Hall in California avenue, Avalon, Saturday night, when they said they seized a gallon of moonshine whisky from a truck he was driving.

HOW THE PROPOSED FOUR-LANE, 74-FOOT BRIDGE WOULD BE BUILT FROM EIGHTH AND WEST STREETS, HOMESTEAD, TO MEET BROWN'S HILL ROAD NEAR BEECHWOOD BOULEVARD AND HAZELWOOD AVENUE

The proposed modern bridge that would carry traffic over river and railroads from Homestead to Squirrel Hill, avoiding hilly, circuitous Brown's Hill road and eliminating danger of grade crossings over which 182 regular trains pass each day. The scheme is part of the plan for connecting northern and southern sections of Allegheny County via through traffic lanes connecting and including the Beechwood and Washington boulevards.

POLICE GUARD AT AMBRIDGE

Councilmanic chambers of Ambridge Borough will be guarded by police tonight as a precautionary move against indicated presence of members of the "Unemployed Council of Ambridge" before the borough body.

Leaders of the unemployment organization have declared they will appear before councilmen to demand relief for the jobless, in spite of two raids made by police on attempted meetings Friday night. Chief J. W. Flocker and a squad of patrolmen broke up gatherings in a Merchant street building and in a vacant lot with tear gas bombs.

Union Soldier Who Gave Pension to 'Rebels' Dies

PATCHOGUE, N. Y., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Col. Alexander Wray, 88, a Yankee veteran, who for 23 years donated his Civil War pension to the Confederate Soldiers' Home at Atlanta, Ga., died yesterday.

Twelve days ago the soldiers of the home unveiled a plaque in his honor after learning he was the "enemy" who contributed to their support.

Col. Wray was born in New York. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted in the artillery and retired a lieutenant colonel.

JEWISH WOMEN SET FOR DRIVE

Nine divisions of women enlisted to work in the $540,000 appeal for 17 agencies under the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies were to be virtually complete today, two weeks before they are to take the field, according to Mrs. Joseph M. Jackson, women's chairman.

Four of the nine groups have held organization meetings, according to the chairman. The remaining five groups will hold meetings. These divisional leaders whose meetings have just been held include Mrs. Nathaniel Spear, Mrs. Samuel Weinhaus, Mrs. Barnett Davis and Mrs. J. des Freund.

WHEN MONEY'S SCARCE

GRIN AND BUDGET

And when money's plentiful, do the same. For a house without a budget is like a ship without a compass or a horse without reins. It runs away with itself.

So budget with the help of your neighborhood A&P where you can be sure of getting real co-operation in the shape of good food at consistently low prices. For A&P stores transact business on such a large scale that they can afford to sell at a little more than cost.

Furthermore, they don't let you get into debt as far as they're concerned, for they sell only for cash—another reason their prices are always so moderate.

So keep your house in order by planning efficiently and spending a little time and money at the nearest A&P. That's the way to make both ends meet when money's scarce. And it's the intelligent way to run a household even when money is plentiful.

NO. 1 OF A SERIES OF ADVERTISEMENTS ON THE STORY OF OLIVER TWIST

Original George Cruikshank Illustration Through Courtesy of Houghton Mifflin Company

"Please sir," said Oliver, "I want some more"

Grace was long but meals were short at the orphanage. The single bowl of soup didn't satisfy boyish appetites whetted by a long day of hemp picking. So Oliver Twist, spokesman for his hungry fellows, rose and faced the master in the big dreary mess hall. Speechless with astonishment, the fat soup-guardian glared at the little rebel. Oliver repeated his request. Striking wildly at the boy's head with the big ladle, the master seized Oliver and called loudly for the assistant who did the institution's flogging. And Oliver was put in solitary confinement.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Mary Oliver Marrying Today

Just everyone in the social world in Pittsburgh and Sewickley is attending the wedding this afternoon at 5 o'clock of Mary Oliver and William Christopher Robinson, Jr. And the ceremony is taking place in St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church of Sewickley, to be followed by a reception in "Cardome," the Edgeworth home of the bride's father and mother, the Henry Olivers.

The bridegroom is the son of the William Christopher Robinsons, of Ridge avenue, North Side, and Franklin Farm, Sewickley Heights.

Giving the bride in marriage is her father. The bride is distinctive in an exquisite gown of deep ivory satin with a yoke of duchess lace and with a court train. Her veil of tulle cascades from a cap of the same lace.

* * *

All her attendants are wearing primrose crepe de chine gowns having brief jackets with three-quarter sleeves banded in fur, and their hats are of brown velvet. Louise Bailey, of Philadelphia, is maid of honor, and the bridesmaids are Virginia Goldsbury, Genevieve Bell, Mary Franklin Robinson, sister of the bridegroom; Elizabeth Alden Jones and Dorothy L. Norton, of Louisville, Ky.; Elizabeth Rutan, of Bryn Mawr, and Sara Ross, of Madison, N. J.

Primrose Frocks

Forsythia and yellow calla lilies bank the altar, and tall tapers placed at intervals along the middle aisle illuminate the church. Officiating is the Rev. Dr. Alleyne C. Howell, the rector.

Alexander Laughlin Robinson is his brother's best man, and the ushers are John S. Laughlin, William D. George, Charles L. Bell, William Lloyd Standish III, Henry Oliver, John H. Ricketson, III, James O. Flower, Frank Faber Brooks, Jr., James Verner Scaife, Jr., of Pittsburgh; Harry Milholland and Jack Watts, of New York; Joseph Roby, of St. Louis, Mo., and Henry Collins, of Philadelphia.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. George J. McKee, of St. James street, have made known the betrothal of their daughter, Carolyn Margaret McKee, and Dr. A. Boyd Miller, Jr., of Pittsburgh, who is the son of Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Miller, of Erie, Pa.

One of the most heralded annual social events of the hunting season took place Saturday night when members of the Rolling Rock Hunt gave a dinner in honor of Richard King Mellon, master of the fox hounds. The affair was given in the Rolling Rock Club at Ligonier. Mrs. Francis Burke Rogers was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, Mrs. Russell Love, Mrs. A. Rex Flinn and Samuel H. Bell.

Hunt Has Dinner

There were 80 guests, and the men wore the formal hunt attire. The long table was in the form of a hollow square, laid with a scarlet cloth, with the club color blue, forming a zig-zag down the center. Small hunt figures in porcelain with red tulips and scarlet tapers in silver holders completed the decorations. A complete miniature of the Grand National Steeplechase, usually held in Aintree, England, was presented to the guest of honor.

HOLIDAY TRADE UNDER 1929

Retail trade in Pittsburgh showed about the usual seasonal pick-up during December, the holiday season, but the dollar volume of sales was substantially below that in the corresponding month of 1929, according to the Pittsburgh Business Review, the monthly publication of the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Pittsburgh.

December sales of the 126 retail stores reporting to the bureau made a gain of 52 per cent over the November sales, but fell 12 per cent below the volume of business reported in December of the year previous. Compared to November, gains were shown in the eight lines included in the retail group. All lines except dry goods, reported declines from December, 1929. Total sales of 126 stores in 1930 were 7.4 per cent smaller than those a year earlier. Retail drugs was the only line to show a gain for the year. Sales of this group increased 2.5 per cent over the previous 12 months.

CAUTION SHOULD BE TAKEN WHEN BUYING ACCESSORIES

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Feb. 2.—No longer do we trifle with those accessories that we once thought so trifling, but give to them the same care as we do the frock or suit. For accessories can make or mar an outfit as, some of us have already discovered. Therefore, a wise woman plans her accessories as carefully as she does the main part of her wardrobe, so that her gloves, bags, jewelry and shoes may be interchangeable and yet create a perfectly harmonious picture with whatever they may be worn. And so haphazard buying of accessories is diminishing as women are learning to shun bargains or pretty trifles, just because they are marked down or attractive.

* * *

ALL THESE THINGS DO is to become the "white elephants" of the wardrobe and then be discarded because they are out of fashion. But, for instance, a beautiful bag of black combined with white or a shoe of the same combination or some striking jewelry of black with white will find many uses with frocks of that combination or of all-white or solid black. But apart from the grouping of accessories, it is interesting to note how an original touch on collar or sleeve can bring interest to the simplest garment. Many houses have been experimenting with the sleeve this season and have used fur trimming in all sorts of clever ways, making an otherwise ordinary coat stand out from any other similar garment. But the bizarre is definitely avoided.

* * *

SKETCHED FOR TODAY are two interesting novelties and a clever fur-trimmed sleeve. Lanvin is showing the necklace, which is of black galalith with connecting links of white. The beads are rectangular in cut and the necklace shows quite plainly that it is of Egyptian inspiration. The evening glove is from Alexandrine. The lower half is of black suede, the upper is of pale pink with encrusted motifs in black. This type of glove is to be avoided unless designed for a definite scheme.

* * *

* * *

STRAW HATS INDICATE the trend of the millinery world. From the advance collection of Le Monnier comes this very new and fresh model. It is of black bakou with a rolled back brim edged with whipped ostrich fronds also in black. The brim has a slight tricorne bend at the sides and is narrow in back.

HUDSON SEAL COATS

Ordinarily, our fur work-rooms are not busy in January. This year, however, to keep our staff of furriers intact, we have made 22 Hudson Seal Coats...utilizing the remaining skins in our stocks. We want to sell these 22 coats immediately, so we've marked them all $210.00...although coats of identical quality

Sold earlier at prices ranging from $300.00 up to $365.00

The coats are particularly smart. They are fashioned on youthful, semi-fitted lines, with a slight flare. All are self-trimmed...the most practical and popular type...with very becoming collars and cuffs. The 22 coats range in size up to 44.

STEEL OFFICIAL URGES HIGH WAGES

E. T. Weir Broadcasting Over WCAE Asserts Pay Scale Should Rise to Aid Trade

Employes should be assured of their present wage scale as one of the primary steps for the return of business prosperity in this country, E. T. Weir, chairman and chief executive of the National Steel Company, said last night in the first of a series of radio addresses from Station WCAE by men prominent in the trades closely connected with Pittsburgh. Mr. Weir said:

"There are, unfortunately, still some employers who believe in the old theory that wages should be reduced as soon as business gets poor, and that by so doing they can reduce the cost of their product; but the modern thought, and which should establish our principles today, should be that the standard of wages determines the standard of living, and that every individual in this great country of ours is entitled to hope for a higher instead of a lower standard, and actions by either individuals or corporations that tend to interfere with this program should be frowned upon by right-thinking people.

'LOW WAGES—HIGH COSTS'

"The wage earner who did an honest day's work was not too highly paid when he was working full time on the present scale of wages, and certainly a reduction now is not justified when partial employment applies to so many. Another sound reason for not reducing is that, to my mind, lower costs can be secured by paying the higher schedule, because it produces efficiency and only through efficiency can low unit costs be secured. Low wages and inefficiency, in my experience, go hand-in-hand and make for higher costs."

Weir attributed much of the depression to excesses of 1929 and the wild inflation resulting.

Weir's address last night is the first of the series arranged by J. L. Kaufman, manager of WCAE. Safford K. Colby, vice-president of the Aluminum Company of America, will be heard next Sunday night.

MUSIC

Pittsburgh Symphony Society

SYRIA MOSQUE

PROGRAM.

Overture, "Russian and Ludmilla" ..... Glinka
Adagio for Strings ..... Vivaldi
Symphony in C Major ("Jupiter") ..... Mozart
Variations on a Rococo Theme ..... Tschaikowsky
Nocturne, "Festivals" ..... Debussy
Chanson Russe ..... Moussorgsky
"The Ride of the Valkyries" ..... Wagner

The Pittsburgh Symphony Society gave its third concert in Syria Mosque last night, but its last concert under Molinari, and the music of that closing Tannhauser March was still ringing in our ears and inviting comparisons. Last night's program might have been shorn of the Debussy and Moussorgsky and then would have been complete enough, but those two works did give the visiting conductor added opportunity.

Mr. Lissfelt

Hans Kindler, recognized as one of the world's excellent cellists, appeared as soloist and as conductor. His sole offering with orchestral accompaniment was the popular Tschaikowsky Variations on a Rococo Theme, wherein he most ably displayed his fine musical sensibilities in all those moods which the great Russian so deftly wrote into his music. Two encores, a Habanera of Ravel and the player's own arrangement of a Rumanian Gypsy Song (played without accompaniment) only further convinced of the player's mighty talents.

Now his conducting is quite another consideration. He plays his orchestra like a solo cello, certainly not intentionally but none the less certainly neglecting woodwinds and brass in an astonishing fashion. This all tends to discolor the ensemble, so that Mozart loses its sparkle, Wagner its gorgeous resonance, and only Vivaldi stands out distinctively, because there again the conductor is on most sympathetic ground, the strings.

The orchestra itself is getting more reliable as we go from concert to concert, and often last night showed its own resourcefulness.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

To Relieve Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises.

If you have catarrhal deafness or head noises go to any May-Liggetts Drug Store or your druggist, and get 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water, and a little sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little, and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has catarrhal deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Should Wife Be Spanked If She Disregards Hubby?

Should papa spank mamma?

No—don't snicker. That's a serious question in this column. And if you think that the ladies are all agin spanking, you're certainly handing yourself a big surprise.

For, believe it or not, there are wives who believe that papa should! Even when mamma is a grown up miss of 32!

Loretta Brown started this brawl. She had a taste for tantrums. But when papa retaliated by spanking her and locking her in the closet, she came sobbing to us with the horrid tale. And asked us what we thought of such a brute. Promptly we told her that she richly deserved what she got and we hoped it would cure her of her nit-wit ways.

Wife Approves

Whereupon Mary Jane applauded and advocated spankings in general. But we thought enough was enough and told her to lay off. But Bessie R. agrees with Mary J. She, too, has the "spank me's." Listen while she speaks her little piece.

"Dear Sally—

"I've been reading your column for some time and get a big kick out of it. This time I just feel as if I had to put in a few words myself.

"I think Mary Jane is right when she says 'women ought to be spanked if they don't mind their husbands,' because I know about five different women who would have made wonderful wives if their husbands had spanked them and made them mind. But, as it was, the 'hubbies' thought too much of them, and they let them do just as they pleased. So they separated, and now the women are running wild all over the lot.

"I know, too, that if my husband hadn't made me mind the first year I was married, I might have tried to run him and we would never have gotten along. Of course, he didn't actually spank me. But he might as well have. He walked out on me, and that was worse.

Wouldn't Listen

"That first year was very unhappy, because I didn't know the real meaning of marriage. I pulled one way—the wrong way—and he pulled the other. He tried to talk to me, but I wouldn't listen. So he left. When he came back it was different. I appreciated him, and did every thing to please him, and we've been very happy. I think that when a couple get married they should compromise and work together, fifty-fifty, and if the woman won't do it, she ought to be spanked!

"BESSIE R."

Sure they should work together, sister. And their marriage won't amount to a hill of beans if they don't. But no woman is under obligations to mind her husband willy nilly, and any grown woman who has to be spanked in order to make her act with common decency is a brainless sap and totally lacking in pride and spunk.

If you don't believe me listen to Genevieve.

Dear Sally—

I certainly agree with your answer on Mary Jane's spanking. She sounds to me as if she were mentally deficient. And she certainly is deficient in pride.

Why on earth should a grown woman have to mind any man? If she hasn't brains enough to act human without being beaten up, she ought to be in a home for the feeble-minded.

And if she keeps on thinking she has to "mind" this big Chief Man of hers, she certainly is fixing up an unpleasant hot spot for herself. If he is so domineering and so sure that he knows it all and that she ought to bow to his every idea now, what on earth will he be later, after she has confirmed him in his conceit?

They don't make them any dumber than this silly, spanked wife. And she likes it, eh? She should have her head examined. That's all. Certainly a wife has no right to do things that cast a reflection on the honor of the family. And she has no right to do things that put the family in any sort of a hole. But as for supposing that one grown human being should have to 'mind' another just because that other is a man and a husband—well, that's my idea of a complete fool.

Equal Rights

"In the first place, the fact that he is a man and her husband is certainly no guarantee that he knows best what is good for the family. An ordinary, half-way intelligent woman usually has plenty of good, worthwhile ideas. Imagine them being squashed and not allowed to see the light of day merely because the MAN of the family thinks he should be boss! Ye gods! Men are only human, and they make just as many mistakes as women do, if they were honest enough to admit it.

"Certainly no wife can always do as she pleases. But then neither can a husband . . . who is a husband of the right kind. They both of them have to give up things for the good of each other and the home, and they should have an equal right to use their judgment—if they have any. But I guess this willing spank victim hasn't any. One can still be an infant at 32. But no one like that has any right to try to settle things for the rest of us who are grown up.

"My husband agrees with me. He would never think of insisting that I take his word for everything just because he's a man. He listens to my ideas, and we talk things over, not from the standpoint of one 'minding' the other, but from the standpoint of what's sense and what can be done under the circumstances. And are we happy? I'll say! We're happy because we try to be fair to each other.

"GENEVIEVE."

So there you are. Now you tell one. Should Papa Spank Mama—or shouldn't he? And what would you do if your papa spanked you?

By FAY KING

A man's wife is always a great factor in his career.

Some wives are very fashionable and always in the foreground, while other wives are always steady, silent unseen influences in the background. Both may be a great help in these vastly different ways.

The wife who is a good homemaker and rears a fine family does not need to be dolled up and devoted to her husband's friends.

No influence carries greater weight than that of a wife devoted to her home and her growing family. Such wives with simple and sensible tastes often counteract completely the adverse opinion husbands have earned through foolish action.

Madge Accepts Floral Offering from Phil Veritzen

As I debated the question of accepting the flowers Mr. Veritzen had offered for Mary's party conscious with every passing fraction of a second that my employer's eyebrows were narrowing into a displeased frown, I wished mightily that Lillian would suddenly come into the hotel library where I was talking to him. I knew perfectly well how she would decide the problem I was debating. With a grim twist of her lips and a hackneyed reference to the sauce for the goose which should also be given to the gander, she would advise me to accept the blossoms. But I was so unsettled by the offer, so disturbed by the thought of Dicky's possible reaction to my acceptance of it, that I longed for Lillian's bolstering common sense.

No one came into the library, however, and I was conscious that my answer to my employer could not longer be delayed. With the reflection that I must make the acceptance a wholehearted one, if I took the flowers at all, I flashed an apologetic smile at him as I spoke.

"Please forgive me for delaying my answer," I said. "I was trying to think if I knew what any of the other women are going to wear. But I can find out for you before noon. Will that be time enough, and may I thank you for a most wonderful offer? Mary is indeed a fortunate youngster. How delighted she will be when I tell her about it. But you are altogether too kind, too lavish. First the theater tickets, and now, these ——"

"Do you really believe Miss Mary will enjoy the knowledge that I am sending flowers for her party?" he asked. "If I know anything of her disposition, I should advise you to tell her nothing about it. If both she and Noel believe that you have provided the flowers, they will be much more comfortable—and so will I."

He had remembered what, in the stress of my own problem, I had forgotten—that Noel and Mary were furiously—and justifiably—angry at him because of the unspeakably cruel and insulting letters he had written to both of them. The remembrance brought with it a rush of the fierce resentment I also had felt when I learned of those letters. If I had followed my impulses at this moment of memory, I should have risen from my chair and taken back the acceptance of my employer's offer which I just had given him.

If I only were sure of what was behind his inexplicable persecution of Mary, and this equally puzzling complacence with which at present he appeared to be regarding the whole affair. I had felt that only a fiendishly cruel mind or one partially deranged could have treated his only son and the boy's betrothed wife in the manner he had adopted. Did his present behavior mean repentance, a return to sanity, fear of possible consequences to himself, or some other motive, as yet veiled?

I felt suddenly as if I were playing a game of chess with an opponent whose moves were only partly visible to me. But common sense reminded me that I had no other recourse but to go on steadily in the way I had begun, taking care only that no hint of my watchfulness of Philip Veritzen, no slightest detail of my guarding of Mary should be relaxed.

"You probably are right," I said, when I had pulled myself together. "But—I cannot keep them in ignorance of your generosity. I should be sailing under false pretenses. But I will do my best to make them —appreciative."

He put up a quick, protesting hand.

"Please, don't," he said. "If you feel it imperative to reveal to them the source of a few trumpery blossoms, can you not wait until after the party?"

There was a sardonic whimsy in his tone that stirred my risibles as much as did his absurd reference to "a few trumpery blossoms," and I could not keep back an amused little laugh. Mr. Veritzen's brow instantly cleared.

"That's better," he said. "You cannot be absurdly quixotic when you can laugh like that. Now tell me at what hour it will be most convenient for you to receive the table flowers, and when can you send me the proper addresses and gown colors of the ladies of your party?"

"The dining room will not be ready for me until 2 o'clock," I said. "If I could have the blossoms here at that time, it would facilitate matters for me."

"They shall be here on the stroke of two," he promised. "Now for the gown colors. First, and most important, what is your own?"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Child Must Have Foods That Make for Vitality

Dr. Copeland

After all is said and done, child health depends largely on what the mother gives. Every conscientious mother today is in far better position to successfully rear children than were her forebears. From the viewpoint of knowledge as to what is best for a child, the modern mother has great advantages.

Of course, poverty plays a large part in malnutrition of the child today, as it always has. There are great problems to be solved in the future for better care of the child, in education, physical care, and mental and social development.

Malnutrition comes most commonly from a diet which is incapable of supplying the needs of the body. To keep a child well and happy, he must first of all have the foods that make for energy and strength. If a child has not nourishing food, when he does not take sufficient amounts of it, when he has improper habits of eating, then something unpleasant is bound to happen. He grows listless, tired, pallid and irritable.

The school child, also the preschool child, for that matter, uses up an enormous amount of energy in his day of work or play. Every movement he makes means just so much energy spent, and this has to be made up in the right kind and amount of food, as well as in rest and sleep. If he doesn't have the food he so much needs, Nature has a way of taking from the child's store of body substances in order to make up the deficiency in food. He loses weight, strength and vitality. His teeth and bones grow soft, every part of his little body suffers.

One of the greatest factors to be blamed for a too small food intake is the school child's breakfast. In the homes where there is plenty it is not uncommon for children to hurry through the meal, taking scarcely a snatch to eat, and then go running all the way to school because they may be late.

Recent investigations among school children showed that thousands of children among the poorer classes had for their breakfasts only coffee and bread. What a travesty on health this is. Every child has a right to a good start in the day and in life.

Breakfast should be an unhurried meal, and for his proper nourishment he should have orange juice, or some other form of fruit, cereal and whole milk, and at least a glass of milk. This starts the day right. He has something to go on to meet the hard work of his morning. He will not be overtired and overhungry at luncheon time.

His luncheon should be adequate. Many a mother sets before her children the easier thing to find, instead of wholesome, nourishing foods that go to make up the well-balanced meal they should have. Dear mothers, you cannot afford to take any chances with your child's health when it comes to his food and eating habits.

Every child should have plenty of rest and sleep. One of the shortest roads to malnutrition is lack of sufficient and restful sleep. Young children need a nap or rest at midday. They need plenty of fresh air and sunshine. This is the path to health.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

There is something dressy about finger nails bearing a highly veneered surface of blazing rose color. That is why the girl in the stunning, exotic robe attending the festive party can get away with them. They look out of place with smocks or sports attire. They also draw attention to hands that are no longer young and soft.

Too little attention is paid to good circulation. It is the sum and substance of health and good looks. It keeps the red nose from blooming. It puts roses in the cheeks where they properly belong. It gingerizes the step and stimulates the mind. Girls with feet as cold as frog's toes have complexions that are pallid. Deep breathing and plenty of vigorous exercise start blood streams promenading.

The condition of the tissues surrounding the soul windows have a good deal to do with the beauty of the eyes. A number of beauty ills are located thereabouts. For example, brown circles which may be an inheritance or which may be due to changes in the pigmentation caused by the absorption of waste products in some part of the body. Styes and granulated lids, swollen tissues about the eyes, little sun ray wrinkles all bring their quota of discontent. They can be remedied.

Normal weight cannot be reduced to measurements and figures. Much depends upon the boney framework. There can be no standard set. Some women who are not perfectly proportioned have shapes that carry clothes well. A woman with a seeing mind will know if she has taken on needless pounds, and will know also at what weight she appears her best. The female form divine has variations.

No sense telling gals to play up their beauty points. They're conscious of them. Note how the one with pretty eyelashes lowers her lids shyly. She of the perfect profile doesn't face anything; she is always posing her face sidewise. Dimples are productive of laughter. Loidies with pretty feet don't hide their little mouses. Women who haven't any special attributes of beauty can console themselves, be thankful they haven't a hair lip or long white whiskers.

Household Hints

When you find a brand of food that you like a great deal, remember the maker's name when next you order. It is foolish to keep trying various kinds of canned foods when you know of a perfectly satisfactory brand.

When lacing the little fellow's shoes try this method and then there will be no accidents from hanging strings. Upon reaching the top eyelet, instead of lacing from the inside out, lace from the outside in. Tie and tuck the ends well down inside the shoes.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dinner Table Conversation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Can you please tell me if it is correct to carry on a general conversation while eating? I have different opinions on this subject, and I have come to the point where I want to know what is right. P. V.

Quite right it is to "chat of this and that" during the meal. To eat in silence is boorish . . . we should talk to our neighbors at a table, and when the conversation at a dinner party becomes general, as it often does once in a while, we enter into the general discussion.

'And Family'—Taboo

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

May I once more ask your advice on the personal matter of my marriage?

In sending wedding invitations to a family of about six, is it necessary to send a separate one to each member of the family, or one to the father and mother, and for each member of the family? Is it permissible to send one to a family and write on the inside envelope something like this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Blank.
Ruth.
Bob.
Dorothy.
Arthur.

M. T.

A.—It is excellent form if our budgeting for the invitations is sufficient for us to send an invitation to Mr. and Mrs. and a separate one to every other member of the family who is old enough to receive these formalities. But if this isn't possible it is perfectly good form to address one envelope for the family. So long as we do not use that taboo expression ". . . . and family!"

Your fundamental idea for the addressing of the envelope is correct, but instead of the first names, we should list the formal names, that is, with their titles, and with no nicknames.

Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Bland
The Misses Ruth and Dorothy Blank
Mr. Robert Blank
Mr. Arthur Blank

The Holder of a Degree

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A girl friend who lives abroad has obtained a bachelor of arts degree at one of the universities there, and I am anxious to know if, when addressing her, the letters "B. A." should be placed after her name on the envelope?

PARTICULAR.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, February 3

Conflicting auguries are read from the adverse lunar transits in this day's chart as they apply to business or workaday affairs. But domestic, social and affectional relations are under excellent sway and will probably be an offsetting factor to the other trials. Employment is under a perilous sway and there is hint of sudden change or disruption. Also there is a menace of writings proving a subtle source of anxiety.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of conflicting conditions in business, but these may be compensated for by pleasant social, domestic and romantic affairs. Be careful to safeguard the employment and funds and be on guard against subtle attack through letters or writings. There is a hint of treachery.

A child born on this day should be gracious, affable and socially popular, this side of its life compensating for some seamy conditions in a business way or employment.

Moores Most Numerous.
Gridders in Basketball.
No Canadian Golf Shift.
Wheat Not to Return.
Tilden Ranking Case.

EIGHT OF SAME NAME IN MAJORS

IN SPITE OF the recent release of Eddie Moore, one-time Pirate, by the Brooklyn club to Oakland in the Pacific Coast League as part payment for Catcher Ernesto Lombardi, the Moore family continues to hold a big lead over all others for the distinction of having the largest representation in the major baseball leagues. As a matter of fact, instead of losing ground since last season, the Moores have gained, as the loss of Eddie is counterbalanced, and then some, by the return of Wilcy and the picking up of a couple of new ones.

Wilcy Moore

Wilcy, a discarded Yankee pitcher, has come back to the upper set as a member of the Red Sox in a draft from St, Paul, and there are enough other Moores, old and new, on the various major league rosters to boost the total to eight. In addition to Wilcy, there are Jim, formerly of the White Sox and now with the A's; Austin, of the Robins; John, of the Cubs; Joe, of the Giants; Albert, of the Cardinals; Randolph, of the Braves, and Carlos, of the Senators.

SO IT WILL be seen that while the Smiths and the Joneses may hold their traditional edge elsewhere, in the big baseball leagues they're just a couple of other families. The Moores are so far ahead of them and all others that there isn't even a chance for an argument. In fact, the Smiths and Joneses, far from being on top, don't even come in second.

Each of those families has only two representatives in the big show at present, and there are several others able to beat that number. The Johnsons are more numerous than any of the rest. The rosters show five players bearing that name, without counting Walter, manager of the Senators. Members of the Collins family number four, and there are three Clarks, three Browns and three Millers.

THE BALL PLAYER who thinks he can prolong his career by resting his legs during the off-season is all wrong, according to Fred Haney, former big leaguer, now with Los Angeles. Haney contends that the diamond athlete who keeps his props in trim by taking daily exercise during the winter will last a great while longer than the one who picks out a soft spot for himself and rides to work.

Ty Cobb's success in remaining on top for more than 20 years and holding his speed is explained by Fred as having been due to the fact that between baseball campaigns Ty tramped the Georgia woods on hunting trips and never permitted his legs to get out of condition.

"EVERY OTHER SMART player will do the same thing," Haney says. "The one who doesn't won't last long. The same rule applies to fighters. Jack Dempsey wouldn't be all shot at 35 if his legs weren't gone. The Dempsey who fought Carpentier would have annihilated Tunney. In the Chicago fight, Jack was a sorry substitute for the former Dempsey. I saw both fights and the difference was amazing. Why should Cobb stay in the big leagues until 40 and Dempsey shoot his wad at 30? Just legs and their proper care. Fighters are worse than ball players in that respect. They lay off between fights and do nothing to keep themselves in shape, but frequently do much to break down their constitutions. When they sign to fight again they have to start in rebuilding waste tissue. You can do that just so many years, and then you're through."

THREE MEMBERS OF Notre Dame's national championship football team are now gaining further laurels on the basketball court and will be seen in action against Pitt here next Saturday night.

Chuck Jaskwich

They are Chuck Jaskwich, who called signals for the shock troops and is a candidate for Frank Carideo's former job at quarterback next fall; Mike Koken, Youngstown (O.) citizen, Marchmont Schwartz's understudy at left halfback, and Fred Staab, reserve fullback, who promises to do big things next season with Joe Savoldi, Moon Mullins and Al Howard out of the competition.

JASKWICH AND STAAB are guards in basketball and Koken is a forward. Another forward who is also a gridder is Steve Bamas. He was not on the varsity squad but hopes to get there this year as a candidate for right half, following the graduation of Marty Brill, Bucky O'Connor and Clarence Kaplan.

Tom Conley, captain of the 1930 football team, was a reserve guard in basketball last year and might have been first string if he had returned this winter, but he chose to play in the post-season charity football game in Los Angeles, which prevented him from reporting in time. Marchy Schwartz also is reputed to be a whirlwind basketball man, but he felt that it would be better for him to take a rest after the football season, so he did not come out for the floor game.

FOLLOWING THE LEAD of the Royal and Ancient Golfing Society of St. Andrews in declining to adopt the new and larger golf ball now in use in the United States, Canada also has decided not to make a change. They'll continue to play under the old conditions there this year. It is officially announced that the 1.62 ball, which has been the regulation pellet in Canada for the last five years, will still be the official one for 1931, and that there will be absolutely no change in the size of type of ball used in the Dominion.

PUBLISHED REPORTS THAT the Brooklyn club would sign Zack Wheat as a coach finally brought an official denial from Treasurer Steve McKeever, who says that while he has the highest personal regard for Zack, it would not be advisable to offer him a job at this time.

"The club manager released Wheat unconditionally a few years ago," McKeever adds, "and perhaps it would result in ill feeling if Zack were to return as coach. We do not want it said that we are handicapping the manager in any way."

THE PERLICK BROTHERS, Herman and Henry, are not the only set of twins in the boxing game at present, Bill Miller, veteran fistic manager, wishes the public to understand.

Miller, formerly Jimmy Bronson's manager, but now going it alone, has another pair of twin brothers under his wing in the Rizzos, operating out of Daytona Beach, Fla. He predicts that one of them, at least—Tommy, a welterweight—will get somewhere eventually.

Bill Tilden

WITH AN ARMY of tennis followers insisting that Bill Tilden is entitled to No. 1 American ranking for 1930 despite the fact that he has since turned professional, the U. S. L. T. A. will be between two fires when it holds its yearly meeting one week from next Saturday. If it denies Tilden a ranking for his final year as an amateur there will be a storm of protest from Bill's friends. If it grants the ranking, it will have to explain why, under exactly the same circumstances, it refused to rank Vincent Richards a few years ago. To be fair, it will have to recognize Tilden. To be consistent, it will have to turn him down. It probably will do the latter, holding that the roll is not so much a ranking list for 1930 as a seeding list for 1931, and that Tilden, now a professional, can no longer be seeded.

VEECK, SLUGGER REACH TERMS AGREEMENT

BEST-PAID PLAYER

The terms of the contract were not revealed. It is understood, however, that Wilson will be the highest paid player in the National League next season.

Hack returned unsigned the first contract tendered him by the Cubs and recently was placed in the "holdout" class. The conference here was arranged to iron out the terms disagreement.

President Veeck and Wilson both admitted to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph that Hack had signed a one-year contract at terms which are entirely satisfactory to both sides. President Veeck reminded the reporter that the policy of the Chicago Cubs is to keep the salary amounts of its players a private matter.

AFTER RUTH'S RECORD

Wilson, however, said everything was "O. K." or he would not have signed. Both the club executive and the player shook hands after the signing and the slugger announced he expects to break Babe Ruth's record for home runs this season.

Hack clouted more homers than the Bambino last season and established a new major league record for driving in runs.

BILL TERRY HOLDOUT

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Bill Terry, slugging first baseman of the New York Giants, thinks he's entitled to a raise in salary for leading the National League in hitting last season.

Terry, here for a brief visit before rturning to his home in Memphis, said the Giants had offered him exactly the same salary he received a year ago. He has turned this offer down.

By CARL W. SHATTO.

The Yellow Jackets, after flirting with an International Hockey League play-off berth for more than two weeks, today face another long, uphill climb to a place in the post-season classic.

When the local skaters leave for Windsor tonight, to battle the second-place Bulldogs there tomorrow, it will be with the strong realization that they either must task a brace or be distanced in the title race.

Cleveland came here last Saturday leading the Jackets by a single point. Referee Jerry LaFlamme awarded the Indians a 2-1 decision in a battle in which Gordy Fraser appeared to have tied the score with a well-directed shot in the last minute of play. The Ohioans then returned home to bag a 2-0 triumph over Windsor last night, and pull away to a lead of two and one-half games over Pittsburgh.

CAN CUT INDIAN LEAD

The Indians have played one game more than the Jackets, and the locals can cut two points from the Cleveland lead by winning tomorrow. Pittsburgh is the only club in the league which enjoys an edge in the season series with Windsor, but the Bulldogs are a savage aggregation on home ice and the Jackets may have to postpone their return to winning ways until Saturday, when the Syracuse Stars will appear here.

Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the local club, has protested Cleveland's win Saturday, but he will demand action only in the event that the defeat results in the Jackets' elimination from the play-offs. Evidence to support the Pittsburgh protest will be placed in the hands of Charles S. King, league prexy who has his executive offices in Windsor, when the Jackets arrive in the Canadian city tomorrow.

SCHEDULE CHANGED

Two more changes in the schedule have been made to give Pittsburgh another Saturday game. The Pittsburgh-London game, billed here for February 12, will be played in London, and the Tecumsehs will come here on Saturday, February 14, to engage in a fray originally scheduled for disposal in London on that night.

LARRY FRENCH IN SHAPE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Lawrence (Larry) French, aggressive Pirate pitcher, may or may not be signed for the coming season, but certainly the left-hander is not among the large army of unemployed.

French was a standout in the diamond battles staged in Cuba between National League clubs directed by Jewel Ens and Dave Bancroft. At the conclusion of these games the pitcher hustled to California.

"We have had a fine winter so far," he writes. "After returning to the West Coast from Cuba we lived in Long Beach, and I was employed in a sporting goods store. Later I went into a bonding house and tried my hand at that. I liked it very well and may follow it each winter now."

IN HOTEL BUSINESS

The French family was very prominent in the history of Oregon, and Larry has some hotel holdings in that state. For a youth of 22, he has been mixed in quite a few enterprises, and he appears to have the knack of making them pay a profit. He sent his letter from the hotel in which he is interested in Dallas, Ore.

"Since I arrived here some three weeks ago," he says, "I have varnished some 40 rooms, so you see it isn't all rest. But every bit you do yourself is something saved. Fred Oatman, lefthand pitcher with whom I used to room in Portland, spent three days with me. I took him fishing on the Coast and we got three salmon. I got one that weighed 16 pounds. SPORT VIGNETTES

One of the names that somehow has managed to escape the lists of old-time boxers who have been invited to attend Father Cox's benefit show for his relief fund, at the Moose Temple, Wednesday night, is that of Frank Morgan . . . Morgan was one of the best of the mittmen of another generation and will be in for a big hand when he acknowledges the introduction of Master of Ceremonies Ray Eberle . . . Other old-timers who are expected to be on hand are John Barber, of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange, remembered by the veterans as the president of the old P. A. C.; Jack McNally, of the old Woods Run Sport Club, now prominent as a promoter of amateur boxing shows on the North Side; Barney Harkins, of the old Pittsburgh Lyceum; L. B. Fleming, of the old Allegheny Athletic Association—the Three A's, and John Carney, of the old Emerald Club.

Chalky Wimler will box Patsy Brannigan in one of the two old-timers' bouts at the benefit show, with Buck Crouse, in whose mind the idea of staging the event was born, sparring with George Chip, of New Castle, former middleweight champion of the world, and an old arch-rival, in the other one. . . At first, Eddie Wimler, elder brother of Chalky, wanted to go on with Patsy, whom he has boxed seven times. . . . This despite the fact that some five years ago Eddie was given up as a cripple by his friends following a mine accident that crushed the heel of one of his feet. . . . Eddie has made an almost miraculous recovery and now can walk about almost as well as before the accident, and a reappearance by him in the ring would have amounted virtually to a case of a return from the dead. . . . Eddie never has forgotten how the local boxing fans rallied to his support in his hour of need and put on a fine benefit show for him in the South Side Market House, and he jumped at this opportunity to repay the kindness. . . . However, the committee did not care to have him risk reinjuring himself, and he will be on hand merely as one of the many veterans who will help to make Wednesday night's show a smashing success, while Brother Chalky carries on in the ring. . . . Eddie now is 36 years old, while Chalky is 27.

One of the best of the old-timers, who is helping to round up other veterans for the show is Yock Henninger, who fought many 15 and 20-round bouts in his time and even engaged in one of 35 rounds. . . . Yock put in 35 years in the mitt sport, and until about five years ago was one of the leading local referees. . . . Since he quit as an official, he has not been seen around the old boxing haunts. . . . His idea of a good evening now is to put on his slippers and turn on the radio and sit and read, or indulge in memories of the good old days when he was a companion of good Peter Maher, the Adonis of his time, who fought all of the leading heavyweights. . . . As a protege of Maher (pronounced Marr), Henninger did much of his boxing out of New York, under the name of Jack Hannigan, to lend the impression that he, like Maher, was an Irishman (and, as a matter of fact, Hannigan was the way the beloved Peter, in his rich brogue, said Henninger). . . . Ask Joe Humphries, the famous announcer, or

H. VOTEL ROLLS 300 SCORE

After upwards of 30 years of trying, Harry Votel, veteran tenpin bowler, finally hit a perfect score of 300 in a match game on his own alleys in East Pittsburgh yesterday afternoon.

The "thrill that comes once in a lifetime" to a bowler was Votel's in his last game of the match, after he had rolled scores of 226 and 220. Harry and his partner won the match by exactly 158 pins.

Eddie Votel, Harry's brother, recently rolled a 300 score in Cincinnati, where he now resides. He also has reached that goal three other times. The scores of yesterday's match:

Central League May Be Disbanded

CLEVELAND, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Representatives of the four clubs remaining in the Central League called a meeting here today to determine whether to reorganize the circuit for another season or throw up the sponge.

The failure of attempts to keep a franchise at Springfield and the withdrawal last season of Richmond, Ind., gave rise to reports that the league, which has been in existence three years, would be disbanded. A number of other cities have applied for franchises to replace the two missing members, but last year's poor attendance made reorganization doubtful.

Life to the college basketballers is getting to be one big series of ups and downs, with emphasis on the downs. Last week's program in this district was not one to shout over, it being light both in point of numbers and caliber. It started off with a nice one as Westminster went sprawling before Geneva and wound up with West Virginia Wesleyan repeating its early season win over West Virginia.

Cliff Battles

In between times, Wednesday evening, to be exact, Geneva messed up an opportunity to make its comeback, which looked like the real thing after Geneva and Westminster were whipped, more formidable by losing to those self-same Mountaineers.

AH—CONCLUSIONS

The two outstanding conclusions that may be drawn from last week's synthetic campaigning are as follows:

One—that Westminster needs a spark plug to keep its gigantic club hitting on all five and all the time, and—two—that this fellow, Cliff Battles, of West Virginia Wesleyan, is about as hot at basketball as he is at football, which is about nine degrees more torrid than Rudy's sax.

The rangy blonde, who convulsed enthusiastic audiences during the gridiron season now resting in great peace, with his sensational dashes for touchdowns against all comers, was the fly in the ointment for West Virginia Saturday night. He threw nine field goals (count 'em), three coming in the last four minutes of play after the Mountaineers had gone into a man-for-man defense act in an effort to whittle down a five-point lead. Those nine points packed the ball some very safely on the ice.

GENEVA BREAKS EVEN

After a very busy week-end, during which Carnegie Tech was defeated and haughty Bethany forced into an extra period ere the Bisons could crack out a two-point victory, the Covenanters (Geneva to you and Ken Loeffler) opened up the week's activity by spilling United Presbyterian basketball blood. Then, things went screwy again and the Beaver Fallsians were trumped by West Virginia in Morgantown.

LOEFFLER SIGNS JOE LUDES

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Emil (Dutch) Loeffler, Oakmont's professional-greenkeeper, has announced the signing of Joe Ludes, of the Manito Gulf Club, Seattle, Wash., as his assistant professional for this year. Ludes will succeed Ned McKenna.

The new Oakmont assistant comes here with a splendid record and a fine reputation as a player and instructor. Prior to working at Manito, Ludes was affiliated with the Oak Hill Country Club, Bartlesville, Okla.

A meeting of the Pennsylvania Society, Sons of American Revolution golf committee, was held at noon today in the Fort Pitt Hotel. George L. Craig, Jr., noted Allegheny star, and president last year, presided. Officers were elected for this year.

Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang is reported to have said no less than 100 candidates are in line for the professional job at the Schenley Park municipal links.

A couple of fractured ribs suffered in training with his younger brother, Phil, have knocked Ted Ross, Chicago's hard-punching Italian middleweight, out of the eight-round semi-final bout with Tiger Joe West of Monessen at Motor Square Garden tonight. Chip Freeman, of Salamanca, N. Y., has been signed to take his place.

Eddie Brannon

The accident is a tough break for Ross, who was born in Bedford avenue here, and moved with his folks to Chicago 20 years ago. He plans to return here and take up his residence, along with Phil, a good welterweight, who has been helping Jackie Fields, former 147-pound champion, get in shape for bouts. The Ross brothers are cousins of Andy Ross, local handler of boxers. Ted has boxed King Levinsky, Haakon Hansen, Red Uhlan, Gary Leach, Larry Johnson, Edgar Norman and other good ones. Freeman is a good performer, who has done most of his boxing in New York State and around Erie.

CHANCE FOR BRANNON

Cowboy Eddie Anderson, of Wyoming, the newly-wedded veteran lightweight boxer, who recently gave Tony Herrera, the Mexican favorite, a busy evening in the same arena, boxes Eddie Brannon, up-and-coming young Negro, of the Hill, in the 10-round main bout tonight.

Sylvan Bass, Jewish welterweight, of Baltimore, makes his local debut against Jimmy Belmont, Frank Klaus' belting Slav, of Braddock, in the second six-rounder, and Joey Spiegel, German-American southpaw lightweight, of Uniontown, meets Larry Kaufman, Scotch-German-American, of McKeesport, and formerly of Louisville, in the opener, set for 8:30.

HAS GOOD RECORD

Brannon has been coming along in fine style since his only knockout defeat by Joey Goodman, in 10 rounds at Duquesne Garden almost a year ago. He has beaten Johnny Sayer, Gene Bellomo, Ky Newton and Frankie Charleston and knocked out Art Caesar, Barney Dare, Bobby Spring, Russell Bradford, Jimmy Reed and Jimmy Kelly in recent battles. If he gets safely past Anderson, he will be in line for many other good matches with opponents of national reputation.

Between Rounds

Just a tip to the wise: Don't fail to read like Jimmy Great begins a series of "Building Up Big Pirates" in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, during the remainder of this week. In these installments he tells of the rise of Pittsburgh's next Frank Moran and his battles with Jim Coffey and Jess Willard in New York as well as the

Pop Clabby, Noted Fight Manager, Killed in Crash

HAMMOND, Ind., Feb. 2.—(AP.)—James (Pop) Clabby, 71, the Pa Stribling of another era, was killed here yesterday when an automobile in which he was riding crashed into a steel bridge girde. His two companions, Chester Sexton and Joseph Smith, were injured.

The dead man was the father of Jimmy Clabby, who has been described as one of the greatest middleweight boxers of all times.

Together with Eddie Clabby, a welterweight who attained lesser fame than his brother, the group made an inseparable trio on barnstorming tours that took them around the world.

The elder Clabby was to be seen in Jimmy's corner on all the latter's major engagements including the bout in which he won the middleweight championship of Australia and the memorable battles with Eddie McGoorty, Frank Klaus, Jack Dillon, Mike Gibbons and Hugo Kelly.

Frankie Palmo, of Cincinnati, who boxes Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, in the 10-round main bout in the Moose ring Friday night, has engaged in more than 150 bouts, but only once before has he shown in Pittsburgh. That was a few years ago, when he won on a foul from Henry Firpo at Motor Square Garden. He has knocked out Benny Burns and Joe Corelli, among others, and his recent decision victims include Johnny Roberts, K. O. Kelly, Chief Elkhart, Chief Payan and Pete Petrosky.

The boxing game is picking up in the Ohio towns, Zanesville, Mansfield and Alliance being among those that are back on the map again.

Ray Alvins' stable of boxers had a good night of it last Friday, King Levinsky knocking out Harry Dillon in two rounds and Ray Kiser beating Frankie Hughes at Milwaukee. Tony Herrera boxing a draw with Sammy Dorfman in his New York Madison Square Garden debut and Battling Bozo defeating Bud Doran in Chicago.

Paul Rinsko, of Charleroi, hopes to even up with Buddy McArthur, for his technical knockout defeat by the latter in their bout at McKeesport two weeks ago when they clash in a return bout in the eight-round semi-final to the Benny McArthur-Mickey Doris battle in the same ring next Thursday night. A split nose led to Rinsko's setback. Promoter Jim McGill today signed Marty Sornick and Hans Roberts to box the second bout.

Morgan advanced a step nearer the Keystone League soccer championship yesterday, the Millers Run cracks defeating Dunlevy, 6-1, in a well-played game. The educated toe of Buff Donnelli spelled defeat for George Grandy and his comrades, the former Duquesne star smashing the sphere into the net three times. A large crowd attended.

Before the game, Manager Howard Mangus announced that the national cup committee had ordered a replay of the Morgan-Shamrock game, to be staged at Cleveland next Sunday.

DEFEAT AVENGED

Morgan was out to avenge its defeat by Dunlevy in the West Penn cup, and operated better than at any previous time this season. It put on pressure early and Lance Smith and George Grandy had a tough time keeping the Upriver team's goal intact. Swinging into shooting position, Buff Donelli soon had Dunlevy two goals to the rear, Mangus, shooting from long range, scoring the third.

Dunlevy fought hard and the game waxed better than the score would indicate. Just before half-time, Fred Donnelli scored the fourth goal, and Buff his third, and his team's fifth marker. Half time was reached with Morgan holding a 5-goals-to-0 advantage.

Goals—Buff Donnelli 3, Fred Donnelli, Mangus, Mitchell, Unbanic. Referee—Brannigan.

BOWER HILL VICTOR

Bower Hill came through to capture the only contest in the Panhandle League, upsetting Mollenauer, 2 to 1, in a fast game. Mather whipped Victory Hill, 5-1, in the Monongahela-Youghiogheny League, and Gallatin won from Shannon, 2-1, in an exhibition game.

In independent battles, National Tube upset Crafton Heights, 3-2; Pittsburgh Youth defeated the Pittsburgh Rovers, 6-3, and Curry nosed out Piney Fork, 3-2.

GOOD MORNING, JUDGE

Quite a few major leaguers on the Coast, including the Pirate's pitcher, were "advised" by Judge Landis to "lay off" their exhibition stuff. Larry and his mates perhaps were not aware of the rule concerning this procedure.

"I was playing ball in the South until the first of the year," he states. "Several of the players from the majors were taking part in the games. Among them were Berger, Kerr, Rhyne and Hurst and myself. We each received a telegram from Judge Landis as long as your arm telling us to stop. He warned us, but didn't fire any one, which was darned nice of him.

"I am in pretty good shape now, though I weigh 192 pounds.

Sam Harris, who managed Terrible Terry McGovern in those salad days and in later years became famous as a theatrical producer, and they'll tell you of the fighting qualities of Yock.

Somehow, this Parade of the Old-timers idea grows bigger and finer as the night of the Big Moment draws near, and we can't conceive of any of the old-time fans, or the present generation, either, staying away from the Moose. . . . . There will be memories, and perhaps tears, and gulps in the throat, as one after another of the "boys" of the era when they fought for glory rather than gold come out from behind the curtain of the past to bask in the warm favor of their public once more, many of them for the last time.—HARRY KECK.

FLOOR DATE SHIFTED

SALEM, W. Va., Feb. 2.—Salem College's home tilt with West Virginia Wesleyan College will be held Wednesday night, February 4, instead of Thursday, February 5, due to other campus activities that are scheduled at Salem for Thursday night, it has been announced by Athletic Director T. Edward Davis.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN, The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XIX.

Once in Reno, Rickard had no thought of being thwarted in his desire to put Jeffries and Johnson into the ring. Tex was sure of his ground here. He knew the governor personally, and, as a matter of fact, had been invited to bring the bout into the famous divorce colony when it became a dud on the coast.

Tex Rickard

Tex had made no provisions for Reno ballyhoo. The show ballyhooed itself. It was one of those rare "naturals," as the saying goes these days. It was even better than that. Here was an unbeatable champion, greatest of his time and considered by many, including Rickard, the marvel of all time, coming back after life of ease and no training, trying to do what turned out to be the impossible.

Jeffries had hired Jim Corbett to act as his special mentor and relied a great deal on Jim's experience and sound judgment in working himself back into condition. Jeff had Walter Kelly, the Virginia Judge, and Eddie Leonard, the minstrel, to cheer him up.

That Jeff thought he was going to win goes without saying. He had planned a world tour as "unbeatable" champion and had invited Rickard to head the parade around the globe. It would have been a wonderful money-maker and a great success if it hadn't been—for Jack Johnson.

RUMORS PRECEDE BOUT

Rumors flew thick and fast. Johnson was going to do this and Johnson was going to do that, including the old rumor of "laying down." They always said that of Johnson, but he had gone on winning in regular fashion year after year. This was a different situation, and, whether the rumors were to turn true or false, Rickard was benefitted by them. They caused everybody to talk about his first real big show. It was the talk of the world and certainly anything but a private fight.

Tex didn't even have preliminaries to worry about. The show didn't need them. It needed no bolstering. If a man decided to see it he went to Reno, that's all.

Talk about the referee was at fever heat a month before the battle. Every crack arbitrator in the land wanted the job, expected it and bellowed like a Bengal tiger if it was even hinted that he might not get the berth.

Charley White, Eddie Graney, now that he had lost out in the bidding; George Siler, Eugene Corri, Billy Roche, Ed Smith, of Chicago; Eddie Smith, of Oakland, Cal.; Bill Brown and many others were mentioned, but Johnson, suspicious and trusting none, wouldn't stand for any of these famous third men. At least, he made Jeff think so.

TEX NOMINATED REFEREE

One day, with the town clogged with noted writers, the situation looked desperate. It did seem that the fight must be called off, for none of the referees mentioned suited Johnson.

He was doing all he could to make it appear that he was afraid of the issue when, as a matter of fact, he was certain that he could whip Jeffries.

One day, shortly before the fight, W. W. Naughton, dean of the boxing writers of this country and then the sports editor of San Francisco Examiner, walked into Rickard's headquarters.

"Tex, you've got to save this referee situation. There doesn't seem any possibility of Johnson accepting the men we've mentioned. He will have to take someone, and someone quickly, or he's going to keep a lot of people away. They won't start for this town unless they're sure the bout is coming off," he said.

Rickard rather enjoyed all of this. It was the talk of the country. Who was going to referee?

"You've got to take the job," said Naughton. "Johnson has refused everybody else. You will be the man," said Naughton.

"Why, I never refereed a bout in my life. I cain't do that," drawled Tex. "Nobody will have any confidence in my ability to hold down the job."

"Yes, they will. You've got a reputation for nerve and honesty and you've got to go in there and save this show. I'm going to publish the fact that you're going to be the third man."

"Don't do that, Bill. I'll referee, but don't say anything about it. I don't want the job, but, if I must, I must. We'll spring it at the last minute."

And that's why even those at the ringside that July 4, 21 years ago, were amazed when they saw Rickard, promoter of the show, get into the ring to referee one of the most important bouts in ring history. It was a ticklish sort of job, but Tex liked the thrill of it, even though he was inexperienced. Jeff and Johnson both agreed on Rickard at the last minute. And he made a good referee. Tex didn't make a single mistake. He was cool, careful and he gave each man an even break. Johnson obeyed orders religiously. He was careful of his punches; in fact, he wasn't leaving a single loophole for disqualification, the one thing that he dreaded before he might get his chance to clinch the title he so coveted.

NOTABLES AT RINGSIDE

The day of the fight found the notables of the world in Reno. Not a politician, actor, sportsman, novelist, writer, big-time producer, doctor, lawyer, banker or business man who wasn't there. No such crowd of notables as sat in at Rickard's Dempsey and Tunney bout at Chicago, of course, but, for its day, the greatest that had seen a fight for the world heavyweight title.

I sat in Rickard's office shortly before he died and was running over the names of the noted men who saw that bout and who had died. I guess there must have been 75 of them. The list included Big Tim Sullivan, Little Tim Sullivan, John L. Sullivan, Stanley Ketchel, Bob Fitzsimmons, Nat Goodwin, Bob Vernon, the stakeholder; Billy Delaney, Johnson's chief second; Jack Gleason and Sam Berger, so prominent in the promotion of the bout; Honest John Kelly, all the Considines save Billy, Johnny Pollock, Bill Rafter, Bob Murphy, Joe Norton, Bill Naughton, Bill Jordan, Harry Foley, Miah Murray, Eddie Smith and many others that escaped our memory. Since that talk, Tad, Eddie Graney, Raymond Hitchcock, Otto Floto, Jack Dougherty and a few others who were prominent at the ringside that day have joined Tex in the great march into the unknown.

PUNCHED AFTER KNOCKOUT

Tex often spoke of the finish of that fight. To this day few know that Rickard actually counted Jeffries out before the real end came.

"Johnson had dropped Jim on the floor near the ropes for a count of nine," Tex said.

"As Jim got up, dazed, Johnson nailed him with a second right-hander and Jim went down, sitting across the lower rope. Jim was so groggy that he couldn't make his feet when he tried to pull himself back into the ring. The lower rope had him see-sawing off balance and Abe Attell and Jim's brother, Jack, ran around, and, with Charley Brennan, then working for the San Francisco Examiner, and now a prominent lawyer of that city, pushed Jeff back into the ring. Nobody heard me counting evidently, but I did count Jim out, even before they pushed him back. Before I could make another move, Jeffries was up and he reeled across the ring toward Johnson. I yelled to Johnson that it was over, but Jack was so intent on landing a finishing blow that he didn't hear me. He struck Jeffries another blow and Jim fell on his face. It didn't matter, I suppose, but I did count him out before I turned to Johnson finally and declared him the winner."

Mother In Long Swim to Feed Family

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Mrs. Katerina Rehua, a Maori woman whose husband has been out of work for nine months, entered an endurance swimming contest here yesterday to earn enough money to buy food for her four children, one of which is only nine weeks old.

She swam 47 hours and 52 minutes, but she finished second to Mercedes Gleitze, who kept up the grind for 23 minutes longer.

Her prize was $500, and Miss Gleitze contributed another $500 from her winnings of $1,500. Mrs. Rehua and her husband said they had spent their last shilling for carefare to the pool where the marathon was conducted.

PERSHING TOLD COL. HOUSE WAR NEEDS

coupled with exports by the French, made it practically certain that Switzerland would remain neutral, although there had been a noticeable increase in pro-German sentiment there following the Italian disaster, with talk of a possible German invasion of Eastern France through Switzerland.

On the other hand, some rumors were heard of a German-Bulgarian offensive against Salonika, while the armistice on the eastern front confirmed the worst fears regarding Russia. The sucesses of the Germans in Italy had given rise to peace hopes among their people which proved embarrassing to the new chancellor, Von Hertling, but he had apparently established an accord among the leaders of Prussia, South Germany and Austro-Hungary.

Not the least hopeful thing was the step just taken toward unity of command in the creation of the Supreme War Council. But the decisive factor in the whole situation, if it could be utilized in time, was the tremendous economical and physical power of the United States. To make that available before it was too late was the problem upon the solution of which depended the success of the allied cause. Would the allies see it and would they work together to solve it?

Attends Conference

My diary notes the following:

"Paris, Thursday, November 29, 1917. Had Maj. Gen. H. L. Scott, observer, as guest on Tuesday; brought him to Paris last night.

Maj. Gen. Kernan

"Have named Maj. Gen. F. J. Kernan as Commander of Line of Communications, relieving Brig. Gen. Patrick, who will direct all construction. Brig. Gen. B. D. Foulois appointed Chief of the Air Service, vice Kenly.

"This morning, accompanied by Harbord, attended Inter-Allied conference held at the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Afterward conferred with Foch, Robertson, Bliss and Vance McCormick.

"Took Thanksgiving Day lunch at Hotel Palais d'Orsay with American Club. Heard good speeches by Viviani, Lawrence Benet, Bainbridge Colby and Tardieu. Called at our Embassy and afterward on Gen. Robertson.

"Have cabled Washington that heavy guns, howitzers and mortars absolutely essential in successful offensive."

Before the assembly for the conference the American delegates, known as the "House party," also my Chief of Staff and myself, were called together informally by Mr. House in order to have a general understanding regarding our part in the proceedings.

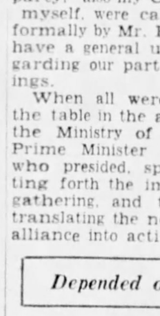
When all were seated around the table in the assembly room at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Prime Minister M. Clemenceau, who presided, spoke briefly, setting forth the importance of the gathering, and the necessity of translating the noble spirit of the alliance into action.

Depended on America

No attempts at oratory were in evidence, nor was there prolonged discourse on any subject. Naturally, questions concerning available man power, shipping, munitions and supplies were mentioned, but only in a general way. The conference did little more than to agree that the study of the various subjects should be left to committees composed of Inter-Allied representatives.

It was very clear that everybody was looking to America to provide the additional man power needed to give the Allies superiority. None was more eager to increase our forces than ourselves, but on my part every possible argument to procure shipping had been presented to the Allies and to our War Department, so when the conference urged the expedition of our forces it made the strongest kind of a case in favor of immediate increase of Allied aid in tonnage.

At the end of the session I asked Generals Foch, Robertson and Bliss to meet with me for an exchange of views regarding a definite program to be recommended as a minimum of American troops that should be sent over by spring. Without saying so, I thought that the larger the program that could be agreed upon as necessary and possible, the more likely we should be to obtain tonnage concessions from our own and British authorities.



Gen. Robertson

For some time reliance upon the Allies for any considerable amount of tonnage had seemed almost in vain, and it looked as though we should have to depend upon our own limited resources for most of it. The British were giving some assistance in the transportation of men. American ships had carried, up to November 1, 67,218, and the British, 54,751.

Need 24 Divisions

After a further meeting with the officers above mentioned, we found ourselves in agreement upon the proposal I had submitted, which is set forth substantially in a cablegram to Secretary of War Baker:

"With the apparent total collapse of Russia and the recent success of the Central Powers in Italy, German morale is undoubtedly much improved and the probability of a serious offensive against the Western Front is greatly increased. In fact, information indicates German concentration in the Vosges opposite Nancy and also near the Swiss frontier. It seems probable that such an offensive may begin this winter. French military authorities are of this opinion and are actually moving troops to meet further developments at both above points.

"While it is not probable that the Central Powers can concentrate their full strength on the Western Front for some months, yet their resumption of the offensive clearly points out their purpose to push the war here before the Americans can bring over a large force.

"It is of the utmost importance to the Allied cause that we move swiftly. The minimum number of troops that we should plan to have in France by the end of June is four army corps, or 24 divisions, in addition to the troops for service of the rear. Have impressed the present emergency upon Gen. Bliss and other members of the conference.

Shipping Needs

"Gens. Robertson, Foch and Bliss agree with me that this is the minimum that should be aimed at. This figure is given as the lowest we should think of, and is no higher because the limit of available transportation would not seem to warrant it.

"A study of transportation facilities shows sufficient American tonnage to bring over this number of troops, but to do so there must be a reduction in the amount allotted to other than Army needs. It is estimated that the shipping needed will have to be rapidly increased up to 2,000,000 tons by May, in addition to the amount already allotted.

"The use of shipping for commercial purposes must be curtailed as much as possible. The Allies are very weak and we must come to their relief this year. The year after may be too late. It is very doubtful if they can hold on until 1919 unless we give them a lot of support this year."

While grave doubt existed generally as to the ability of the Allies to hold on until we should be able to afford assistance that would turn the balance in their favor, there was no dimunition of the fighting spirit among the leaders, as indicated particularly by the recent inauguration of a very vigorous war policy by M. Clemenceau.

However, it was well known that in England outside of government circles there was a sentiment in certain quarters in favor of ending the war by negotiation. One did not hear so very much of it in France, but the arguments presented by those who held this view were that the Germans, having put Russia and Rumania and possibly Italy out of the war, would now have to fight only on the Western Front.

Morale Lowered

The ideas of a "reasonable man's peace" and "no desire to crush Germany," although characterized by the Government as "pro-German" and pacifistic, were nevertheless supported by not a few influential men and openly so by Lord Lansdowne. This sort of peace was also favored by several British newspapers, as reported to me at the time, such as the Manchester Guardian, Daily News, Westminster Gazette and The Nation.

The existence of such sentiments without doubt had a more or less depressing effect, for the time being, upon British morale, and it certainly set the rest of us thinking, although, being in close personal touch with all the civil and military leaders, I was not at al. of the opinion that it was generally taken seriously.

The results of the British success at Cambrai were not to be permanent, as the Germans quickly retaliated. Gen. von Marwitz hastily assembled a force of some fifteen divisions, and November 30 suddenly launched a violent counter-attack. The British were short of reserves and before Von Marwitz was stopped his troops had regained most of the lost ground.

It was in this operation that a detachment of our 11th Regiment of Engineers became engaged while serving with the British. The men, to the number of 280, were at work in the Gauzacourt Railway yards when the Germans attacked. One officer and nine men were wounded, and the detachment withdrew. They were then given arms and fought with the British.

Co-operation Promoted

The second conference of the Supreme War Council was held at Versailles December 1, the first having been held at Rapallo when the council was established. Our representatives, political and military, at this meeting, were Mr. House and Gen. Bliss, respectively.

Col. House

At the opening session M. Clemenceau drew attention to the general situation, referring especially to the collapse of Russia, the probable release of enemy troops from that front, teh adverse situation in Italy, the depletion of Allied man power and the reliance of the Allies on American assistance.

The Premier enjoined the military representatives "to bear in mind that their function is to advise the Supreme War Council as a whole and not merely as representatives of their respective nations on the council, and that they should view the problems confronting them not from a national standpoint, but from that of the Allies as a whole."

The military representatives at this conference were instructed to examine the military situation and report their recommendations as to the future plan of operations; to study the immediate situation in Italy from the offensive as well as from the defensive point of view, and to report on the utilization of the Belgian army.

It was evident that this body was to become a kind of superparliament not only for the discussion of resources, aims and purposes, but for the determination of policies looking to concert of action in support of the military efforts. The spirit in which the problems were approached at this meeting made it clear that the Supreme War Council would sensibly promote cooperation among the powers.

The second meeting of the Inter-Allied conference December 3 closed its sessions. None of the questions brought before the first session could be settled, but they were taken up by the more permanent body, the Supreme War Council, which, as time went on, undertook to coordinate the work of the various committees that had been formed to handle the problems involved.

BANKER FAVORS TAX REPEAL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Repeal of the capital gains tax was recommended today by Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the National City Bank of New York, as one way to prevent a recurrence of stock market inflations.

The financier told the Senate banking investigating committee government revenues would be increased or at least maintained, if the tax on profits made on the sale of securities were eliminated.

"Whether it is practicable to eliminate it all at once I can't say, but it is one of those faults in taxation that in my opinion is disastrous both in a rising and falling market."

He explained holders of securities retain them when the market is going up in hopes of reaping the utmost profit, and sell in a declining market to avoid paying the tax. He said capital gains tax returns for 1930 would be found much reduced, while those on 1929 operations would be larger owing to the profits made. He said:

"If a man can take his gains without a break and take his losses the same way, there will be a greater mobility of capital and through that the government will get as great if not greater revenue."

SLOW RECOVERY HELD BEST BY ECONOMIST

British Railroad Official Warns Against Sudden Excessive Optimism

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Evidence is accumulating to the effect that the American financial public is growing tired of remaining pessimistic.

Optimism, as a matter of fact, is the normal mental state of the American people. With the problems of economic recuperation intricate and profound, nothing is to be gained by a swing of the pendulum toward excessive optimism.

From overseas, that brilliant economic observer, Sir Josiah Stamp, British railroad head, economist and director of the Bank of England, cautions:

Mr. Rukeyser.

"Recuperation must be gradual, but the patient must not do the things that would delay it. Above all we must avoid making a stock exchange boom and overvaluing the recovery, otherwise a series of painful setbacks will weaken real optimists."

Some veteran American financiers, believing the American public has not lost its taste for common stock, believe large sized markets are ahead, as soon as speculative investors become convinced that a genuine business recovery is in the making.

With the will toward venturesomeness recently strengthened, the public should nevertheless be ready for further bad news concerning water already over the dam as the annual corporation reports of earnings for 1930 come out. The main issue is not what the facts will be, as that is pretty well known. The question at stake is one of interpretation. The optimist will assume that the great, progressive corporations went through a subnormal year, whereas the more skeptical and pessimistic will be inclined to regard the new profits as a new normal. Past experience has shown wide variations in profits through the business cycle.

The Glass investigation at Washington and the inquiry into the affairs of the defunct Bank of United States in New York, have raised anew the question of public policy toward security affiliates of banks. This new ally of banks developed since the war. At the beginning, one motive for starting such companies was to have a convenient place to lodge the hidden assets of banks which controlled them. Affiliates are capable of gross abuse, yet in good hands they add to flexibility in banking.

Usually their shares are sold in units with those of the bank itself, and, as long as the affiliates are mere cats in the bag, it is impossible for outsiders scientifically to appraise the intrinsic value of bank stock units. The present system makes for mystery, promoting unwise speculation, which is especially harmful when it makes shares of fiduciary institutions highly volatile.

FOLLOW PERSHING'S STORY AND WIN CASH!

$3,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES

For Readers of the Sun-Telegraph Who Follow Pershing's Own Story of the War

CAREFULLY READ THESE SIMPLE RULES

RULE 1—With the beginning of the publication of General Pershing's Own Story of the World War, Monday, January 12, 1931, the daily and Sunday Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph inaugurates a Pershing test in which $3,000.00 in cash prizes will be awarded to readers who submit the correct or most nearly correct answers to a set of ten questions pertaining to dates and episodes chronicled in the Pershing narrative. Contestants will also be asked to submit a letter of not more than 200 words to the question "What is the most important episodes chronicled in the Pershing memoirs published in the Sun-Telegraph and why?" This letter will be judged as a part of the Pershing test with the answers to the ten questions. The test questions will be published from time to time during the publication of the story in the Sun-Telegraph and contestants will be allowed ten days to prepare and submit their answers after the last chapter has been printed. The Pershing story will run approximately ten weeks. The exact date of the time limit for submitting answers will be announced later—contingent upon the closing date of the story.

RULE 2—The Pershing test is open to everyone except employes of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and their families.

RULE 3—A total sum of $3,000.00 in cash will be awarded as prizes—$500.00 to each of six classes or groups as follows:

CLASS NO 1—Grade School Children.

CLASS No. 3—College Students.

CLASS NO. 5—Members of the American Legion and Other Organizations That Include World War Veterans.

CLASS NO. 6—All Other Readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

FIRST PRIZE	$200.00
SECOND PRIZE	100.00
THIRD PRIZE	50.00
FOURTH PRIZE	25.00
FIFTH PRIZE	15.00
SIXTH TO TENTH PRIZES (INC.), $10.00 EACH	50.00
ELEVENTH TO TWENTY-SECOND PRIZES (INC.), $5 EACH	60.00
TOTAL	$500.00
132 CASH PRIZES IN ALL, TOTALING	$3,000.00

In case of ties, contestants so tied will be awarded equal prizes

RULE 5—The answers submitted in the Sun-Telegraph Pershing test will be examined by a special board of judges, none of whom will be employes of the Sun-Telegraph. The board of judges will make the awards and their judgment will be final. The sets of answers when submitted become the property of the Sun-Telegraph and will not be returned. All sets of answers submitted must be mailed first class postage prepaid and directed to the Pershing Contest Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

RULE 6—You do not have to buy a daily or Sunday Sun-Telegraph to participate in this contest. There is free access to the files of the Sun-Telegraph at the public libraries or at the publication offices of this newspaper.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS LOWER TENDENCY

Baking Shares Lead in Temporary Upturn in Morning—Trading Draggy

NEW YORK, Feb 2.—(AP.)—The financial markets ventured into the short month cautiously today.

The share market displayed a lower tendency in the main, but showed no indication of throwing off its lassitude. The abbreviated month of February is traditionally a dead month, but the precedent is frequently violated and in view of the meagre news fare for the first month of the year traders were without conviction that the short month would produce profits for the shorts. Bonds were sluggish, but the decline of last week appeared to have been checked.

Stocks had a temporary upturn in the morning, in which the baking stocks were prominent.

The sales reports for the two leading mail order houses for the first period of the year were regarded as fairly satisfactory. Sears-Roebuck showed a drop of 14 1-10 per cent from the like period of last year, while Montgomery Ward's January sales volume was off only 9 3-10 per cent, against a drop of 9 9-10 in December.

The disorganization with which the petroleum industry is still struggling was clearly shown by the Indiana dividend action. The management explained that the regular dividend was earned, but a lower disbursement seemed prudent in a period of unsettlement. In a discussion of the situation, the managing director of Royal Dutch said that the policy of oil conservation had reached a critical stage, and warned producers that abandonment of the principle would be "disastrous for many." He said unrestricted production would surely result in a day of reckoning for the smaller units, although they might find temporary financial support from "misguided" interests not thoroughly familiar with the industry.

The veteran's bonus project continued to bring warnings from high banking sources. Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the National City, appearing before the Glass committee of the Senate, expressed the opinion that a $3,500,000,000 bond issue for that purpose would result in hundreds of small bank suspensions.

The money market remained glutted, with rates stationary, although the month-end settlements may take up a little of slack during the next few days.

Food Cost Slashed By Argentine Government

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Living expenses have dropped in Buenos Aires. With the government entering the retail food business, potatoes were selling at less than 1 cent a pound, soap a cent a pound, milk approximately 5 cents a quart, and flour at a reduced price. Rents are expected to be lowered correspondingly later.

Hoping to bring about a general decrease in living expenses, the government has entered the business of selling food supplies.

The movement apparently has gained momentum through extensive newspaper publicity, and because neighboring private dealers must necessarily reduce prices to compete.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The turn into a new month found the curb market colorless today. Trading was on such a small scale that price movements meant little or nothing.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

Forbes

Bank Giants, Unworried, Go Vacationing.

By B. C. FORBES

This is the first time many of them have felt safe in leaving their posts since the 1929 panic. What such men have lately told me is:

"No new danger spots have been breaking out lately. All situations requiring attention became known before the end of the year, it now appears. Since then quiet but very definite progress has been made in strengthening the general financial structure. Therefore, now is a good time to have some rest and recreation."

THIS BETTERMENT in sentiment in the highest financial circles has been the most notable development during the first month of the year. It has been far more pronounced than industrial or business betterment. It has been more pronounced, too, than the betterment in the security markets.

The significance of this change in attitude should not be minimized. So long as the controllers of the most powerful purse strings were panicky or even apprehensive, there was scant likelihood of any substantial uplift in the financial world. Now that nervousness has virtually disappeared, the way is clear for a new forward movement.

Let me hasten to add, however, that no fireworks are expected or desired. Our leading financiers and bankers are still a sober, chastened, conservative lot. They want to see slow rather than spectacular progress. Immoderate bullish outbursts, either in the security markets or in the business world would create fresh distrust. Conditions, they argue, warrant no such demonstrations. Like military generals, they are anxious to consolidate each gain before another adventure is attempted.

SO FAR there have been no runaway performances in investments or in business.

The fact is that January has not brought any notable advance all along the line. Gains in certain industries, such as steel, motors, textiles, coal, building, have been partly offset by mild recessions in other directions, as evidenced by the sagging tendency of the general commodity price level. The powers that be are less impressed by actual speeding up of the business pace than by the accumulating evidence that the severe downswing has run its course and that this should normally be followed by some measure of recovery.

In other words, the depression patient is now regarded as having passed the crisis and as being headed for convalescence.

THE SECURITY markets were doing well until fears were aroused that the lawmakers would vote for the raising of more than three billion dollars by the government to pay cash compensation to ex-soldiers. Until last week it had not been considered even remotely possible that any such action would be seriously contemplated. The moment this complacency was exploded, the entire bond market was thrown into alarm. Whereas bonds had been steadily gaining in strength, with new high peaks repeatedly touched, they reversed their course and suffered a loss each successive day.

This spoiled many projected bond offerings. Underwriters, encouraged by the absorption of earlier flotations, had planned to go ahead in order to take advantage of extremely low money rates and the reviving confidence of investors.

This scare is expected to subside almost as quickly as it broke out, because the financial world cannot conceive that Congress will ignore the warnings of the levelheaded Secretary Mellon and other recognized authorities.

STOCK MARKET commentators point out that bear raiders have lost much of their boldness and are now quick to run to cover. They had figured that the publication of bad annual statements would frighten stockholders. To date nothing of the kind has occurred. Even occasional reductions in dividends have not precipitated extensive liquidation. This is perfectly natural, in view of the abnormally low quotations now ruling.

THE MOST disappointing feature is the failure of leading farm products to recover in value. Wheat and corn closed the week with a net loss and cotton barely held its own. Hides, a not unimportant commodity, broke to a new low level. Copper and rubber also declined.

FEBRUARY is counted upon to bring somewhat more convincing evidence that the corner has been definitely turned.

Duke Manages to Get Jim To Prolong Visit

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson, Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later, Duke is about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He claims he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites him to stay. Duke doubts Jim's story. That night, Mrs. Calvert's pearls are stolen. Duke questions the maid about them. The maid doubts Kitty's honesty. Mrs. Calvert becomes ill after the excitement. Duke accuses Jim of lying about being held up. Jim says he lied because he did not trust Duke and wanted to get back to the Calvert home. Connie tells her mother that she is not sure whether she loves Duke. Duke seeks the butler's aid to solve the robbery mystery. The butler suspects the maid.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLIX.

It would be necessary, Connie said, for her to go into Stamford tomorrow and interview a prospective new maid at the employment agency.

"I hate to see Smith go," she said, "but I suppose this business of pearls has upset her and she feels uncomfortable. I don't know that I blame her."

If Mary Smith left tomorrow, Garson realized quickly that she would, by that act, place herself out of reach. If the suspicion of Higgins were true—if she really had stolen the pearls—she would thus be getting them away to a place of security. If anything was to be done, it would have to be done almost at once.

Duke Puzzles Connie

Throughout dinner the thought kept returning to him that tomorrow might be too late to solve the mystery of the pearls. This was probably too weak; somehow it was common sense. The only possible excuse for suspecting Mary Smith came from Higgins. Inevitably, Jim Tracy was linked doubtfully with the maid. If it were possible to know what Mary Smith had to say to Tracy, when Higgins saw them, much would be clear.

After dinner, when cigarets were being lit, he had an opportunity to draw Connie alone to a corner of the veranda to watch a sunset.

"Higgins is foolish," Connie responded, quickly. "But for heaven's sake, let's quit worrying about it. Mother and I decided this afternoon that she is going away tomorrow to White Sulphur Springs with some of her people. Keeping expensive jewelry is foolish, anyway, and we probably deserve the loss. It won't break us, and rather than have a lot of unpleasant publicity we're not going to press a claim against the insurance company. I'll go into their office in a day or so and tell them what happened—and see what they are willing to do."

It was not Duke Garson's intention to tell Connie about Mary Smith and Jim Tracy. No need to worry her with additional complications.

"Why don't you ask Tracy to stay here again tonight?" he asked her suddenly.

Astonishment came into Connie's eyes; despite her effort to fathom him, Duke Garson remained to her an enigma. "Why on earth should I ask Jim to stay again tonight?"

Cannot Explain

The truth was that Duke Garson was unable to present an adequate answer, either to her or to himself. Merely, he had a hunch, a forewarning, a subconscious desire to hold this little group together as closely and as long as possible. They had all been under one roof when the pearls were stolen; under the same roof, with the same people together, the best conditions for a solution would be maintained. Beyond that he had no plan; nothing upon which he could rely but the hope of developing action, a product, largely mental, engendered out of the reaction of personality on personality. It was as though he meant to stir a number of dissembled chemicals in a jar and wait for results. So vague an impression, such a shadowy expectation, was too difficult for an attempted explanation to Connie.

"Suppose a thief should come back for more loot?" Garson smiled at her. "If there was a row I'd need some help, wouldn't I?"

Kitty Observes Maid

"But that's ridiculous!" Connie protested. "You're driving at something and you must tell me the trouble. What is it?"

"I don't know myself," Garson admitted. "I just have a feeling that I'd like Tracy to be in the house tonight."

Connie looked at him steadfastly; again, now, as the light of day faded, the subtle emanations of his charm began to reach her with that queer, disturbing force that nullified all else. The thing that impressed her with a little tremor of fright was that he wore so well. His attraction was definite and enduring; not a whim, an emotional illusion falsely created by over-wrought nerves.

The palpitating glamor in her heart, beginning again to stir, was too poignant to be relegated to the realm of fancy.

"Whatever you think best, I'll do," she told him, softly.

"Why don't you stay here with us tonight again, Jim?" she asked, pleasantly. "Mother is going away tomorrow and maybe she might be a little less nervous if there were a couple of men in the house. You can stay, can't you?"

"Sure thing," Jim Tracy responded, instantly.

"I'm getting so used to having Jim around that pretty soon I won't know what to do without him," she declared, smilingly. "The only thing is I'm jealous."

"Of whom—not of me, I hope?" Connie asked.

"Not of you, Connie—I know where you stand. But somebody else around here is looking at him with longing glances. Oh, I saw several of her love glances. The nerve of her."

"Who?" Connie demanded again.

DAILY TRUE STORY — Both Ways

There was 10 years difference in the ages of Helen and Olive Waverly.

Unless you knew about it you would have hesitated to believe that they were sisters.

When Helen was 20 and Olive 10 they went to live with Aunt Agnes, upon the death of their father, who had left them little of the world's goods.

Helen worked first in a shop. It didn't take her long to see that there was no particular future and that waiting on fussy, snobbish women not only wearied her physically, but got on her nerves. In a few years she would be as pale and wrinkled as Miss Giggs, who had worked there a long while.

Helen spoke of this to her Aunt Agnes.

"It is unpleasant; many things in life are unpleasant, my dear. Why not take the natural course?"

"What is that?"

"Marry."

"Frying pan to fire," Helen said disdainfully.

"There is Jimmy Upson and Mr. Thorbold and Thomas Comson. Each one admires you, and each one has spoken to me about you."

"That's what I mean—frying pan to fire. Jimmy sells goods in a sports shop and we'd live in two rooms and bath. Mr. Thorbold sells insurance and doesn't make any too much. He's the sort of man who snaps a heavy elastic band around his billfold so that he will have time to think twice before he can get it open and spend a dollar. As for Tommy, he's downright lazy and it's hard enough to support himself. I prefer my independence."

"If you could marry you'd get a nice home and I could take care of Ollie."

Aunt Objects

Herein was evinced the one warm spot in the rather cold and ever calculating heart of Helen Waverly—her love for her kid sister Ollie.

It was this conversation that determined Helen to find a better paying position. She finally did, in a beauty parlor.

Helen worked deftly at this, and daily she marveled.

Mr. Jerome Burtson took note of Helen. He asked her out. She went, gladly. They had an enjoyable evening. Aunt Agnes, however, after Helen had been out four evenings in one week, began to worry and to object.

"But some of the time I had late work, emergency work on some actresses," Helen said with a readiness that was amazing. She explained that many came to be prettied up after a performance which left them tired and nervous, when they wanted to go to places and look their best.

After a while Mr. Jerome Burtson suggested to Helen that it would be rather gay if he called himself Berton Johnson and she called herself Mrs. Johnson and they acquired a nice little apartment on the avenue.

"I like you," Helen said, playing the frankness game, "but how do you know you can afford it?"

He demonstrated by letting her secure the apartment and giving her plenty to dress herself as befitting the circumstances.

Helen had a talk with Aunt Agnes. She told her that she was ambitious to send sister Ollie to college and to give her the best and that if she took a room down near the beauty parlor she could do all the overtime work and double her income.

Once a week, sometimes oftener, Helen visited her aunt and her sister Ollie. She donated much more money than ever before and she tried, when making these calls, to wear the plainest of her new clothes.

Refuses Money

"I can't take the money," Aunt Agnes said, coldly.

"You haven't been working at the beauty parlor for months and months. You have become a bad woman, Helen," Aunt Agnes said.

"Hush," Helen said, fearing that Ollie might come in and hear. "It's a secret marriage."

"Don't lie! There is no marriage about it," and Aunt Agnes told Helen, with bitterness and in plain words, just what she had become.

"It is worse than that. I know all about it, Helen. You have deliberately stepped through the door of decency into hell, and the door to hell opens only one way."

"Yes, darling," Helen said, quickly. "I'm always talking about new styles. I ran in to say goodby."

"Going away from the city? You can't leave me like that, dear, please," innocent Ollie said.

Helen looked appealingly at her aunt.

"Oh, it's business—traveling to demonstrate new beauty things; splendid change. I'll be running back, and making lots of money, so I can send you away to college."

"I don't want money, and I want you to make short trips and see me often, Helen, dear."

"Don't tell her," Helen pleaded. "I'd kill myself rather than tell her of this awful thing—but don't come back and don't send money—you have deliberately gone through that door; you can't come back—"

She went to the theater that night with "Mr. Johnson." There was a line about Park avenue being a place where bad women walked with good dogs. He laughed heartily. Helen also laughed. It seemed to be real laughter, but it wasn't.

She went into a shop one day and saw her sister Ollie behind the counter. She fled before Ollie saw her. Helen then learned that Aunt Agnes had died and that sister Ollie had to go to work.

At this time she had become notorious, under another name, as a hostess in a high-priced low-grade night club. And how she did play the suckers! She had more wiles and less heart than Circe of old.

How she wanted to see Ollie, to talk to her, to help her, but she dare not. The words of her aunt came back to her; she had passed through the door into hell and the door opened only one way.

Aids Humanity

And then she saw Ollie one night at this club! Helen nearly collapsed, for Ollie was with Ed Gragen—and Ed Gragen had been one of Helen's men at one time. More than that, Ollie was having drinks and dancing and being gay and charming.

Helen went to Mulligan, their bouncer. "Chuck Gragen out," she ordered, "and take the girl into the office."

He did so. Helen, in street clothes, went to the office and took Ollie to her room. She remained there the rest of the night. Three days later Ollie and Helen were westward bound, for while she had lost health and respect and decency, she had saved money.

Today they are living happily in a little town in the Southwest. Ollie is soon to be married and Helen is highly and deservedly respected.

She is known to be especially interested in helping girls who have erred, but only these girls know that Helen says to them, "You can come back, dearie. It's a lie to say that the door to hell opens only one way—it opens both ways, I know!"

Interesting Neck Treatment
Pattern 2086
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS.

Spring frocks show a feminine grace that is intensely flattering. This model places its flares on bodice, sleeve and skirt in a delightful manner. Especially noteworthy is the treatment of the collar which ends at the left shoulder and is replaced by a soft bow of the fabric. Three-quarter sleeves are very popular. The frock opens in coat fashion, and is well adapted for maternity use.

Pattern 2086 may be fashioned of satin, flat crepe or triple georgette. A solid color or a print will make up with equal smartness.

By "GILDED LILY."

I was fascinated by the great maps which hung on the wall, and which were covered with dozens of little colored pins. The big executive was tapping his fingers together nervously and I noticed that he swiveled around and around like mad in his swivel chair. Every few minutes he would press one of the many pearl buttons on his desk and a window shade would fly up or down instantly.

Finally he arose and walked toward the window, gazing out over the city. After a silence of several minutes he cleared his throat and turned toward me.

"The trouble with you," he said, "is that you have never suffered. I am afraid you have loved not well, but too wisely." With that he slapped his knee in apparent delight. In a moment he was serious again, and said: "Go out into the world. Suffer. Then pull yourself out of the gutter. Marry a nice man and come back, then we'll see if we cannot agree on a story."

Real Relief in Sight

Emergency Committee's Plan Is One of the Best Devised to Take Care of the Unemployed

Of all the suggestions made for solution of the unemployment problem there is none that will give the citizens more satisfaction than that of the Allegheny County Emergency Committee, announced by Arthur E. Braun, the chairman.

The business men composing the committee have drawn up a program under which funds to be contributed by corporations and individuals will be used to tide over those who are in distress.

The welfare organizations are to be supplied with money to meet immediate needs, but ultimately the committee intends to supply not doles but remunerative work.

The community's thanks are due the committee. Its plan clears away the difficulties raised by the exhaustion of the city's relief funds.

The city will continue to help by starting $3,303,500 worth of public works, which will furnish work to a large number of idle men.

With this admirable co-operation between the city and the business men there is assurance of speedy improvement in the condition of Pittsburgh's "hard times" victims.

The Low Price of Milk

It Is to Be Hoped the Reduction Will Stimulate Demand for This "Perfect Food."

The price of milk has been reduced in Pittsburgh to 12 cents a quart, the lowest point to which it has fallen in many years.

In Ohio valley towns between Steubenville and Moundsville, including Wheeling, the price has dropped to 11 cents.

One of the factors that produced the drop was a falling off in consumption. Consumption has fallen off because the breadwinners in many families are out of work and cannot buy as much milk as they would if they were regularly employed.

A decline in the use of milk is more to be regretted than a falling off in the consumption of any other food. Milk has well been described as "the perfect food." It is good for adults as well as children.

It is to be hoped the decline in the price will stimulate demand.

Public Favors Payment

Action Taken by Oakmont Chamber of Commerce Indicates Sentiment Here on Veterans' Compensation.

The Oakmont body has gone on record as favoring payment now, and not requiring the former soldiers to wait 15 years or more for the maturity of the certificates.

The chamber has telegraphed Pennsylvania senators and congressmen that it believes the payment should be made in 12 or more monthly instalments. The suggestion has also been made that the service certificates be exchanged for government bonds.

There will be differences of opinion as to how payment should be made; but there is no doubt that sentiment in the Pittsburgh district is largely in favor of paying the veterans now, rather than in 1945.

Airport Manager Named

With Experienced Man in Charge, Aviation Should Now Progress Rapidly in County.

The appointment of Carl W. Forcier as manager of Allegheny County's airport is the first step towards actual operation of the municipal landing field.

The County Commissioners are to be congratulated on their good sense in choosing an experienced aviation man for the job instead of using it for political patronage.

There have been many delays in the construction of the airport and charges have been issued that have made the taxpayers and the aviation companies feel like throwing up their hands in disgust. Let us hope all that is now ended.

Wasting People's Money

Nye Committee More Expensive Than Senate's Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Every time it votes a new appropriation for the Nye Committee, the United States Senate squanders the people's money upon a sapping expedition to undermine the people's constitution and violate their sovereignty in the several states.

Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, exposed the expensiveness of this expedition when he read into the Congressional Record the itemized expense account of the Nye Committee since its creation last April.

This account shows that the activities of this committee and its staff of hired snoopers have already cost this country $96,503 and Chairman Nye is asking for $50,000 more.

This evidence explodes the theory that the special committee headed by "the North Dakota Travelers" investigates at less cost to the public than the Senate's standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The truth is that the Nye Committee owes its very existence to the refusal of the Committee on Privileges and Elections to extend its investigation of senatorial elections beyond the limits prescribed by law.

In its standing Committee on Privileges and Elections the Senate has at its disposal a lawful and competent agent to conduct a lawful and effective inquiry whenever a Senator or a candidate for the Senate files a contest.

This committee has functioned in the past. It can function in the future. It is the proper committee to pass upon all questions involving the integrity of senatorial elections.

No special committee is required to supplement the orderly and lawful activities of the standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

More democracy is needed in government to protect the rights of the public and compel respect for the Constitution. The nation will be benefited by the return to power of the Democratic Party and the violation of states rights and popular rights by the Nye Committee is one of the good reasons why the Republican Party should be removed from place and the Democratic Party restored to power.

America's Volcano

By Nelson Harding

In continuous eruption
Is the flaming deadly weapon,
Spouting lead and smoke of powder

And beneath the leaden shower,
Fall the fearful toll of victims

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

A Man to Love—But Not to Marry

Some men were born to be loved—but never to be married. The Idealist is one of these.

* * *

An Idealist is a man who always believes that "the next girl" will be the Peerless Woman of his visions.

* * *

To an Idealist, love is a glorified dream and when it turns into a placid reality or a nightmare, he always blames Fate — or the woman.

* * *

An Idealist can make a Purgatory of life for everybody around him while he is working blissfully for a Utopia somewhere over in Abyssinia or Mesopotamia.

He can write inspired poems to "woman's delicate little hands," while his wife washes the dishes, peels potatoes, and tries to pacify the landlord.

* * *

He is always looking passionately for the Beautiful in life—but he is usually looking the other way when the waiter brings the checks.

* * *

* * *

And when he does marry, he always married "the wrong woman," because he looks at every woman through a mist of dreams and a cloud of rosy illusions—and no woman can live up to the picture when she is wearing a bungalow apron and cooking waffles over a gas range.

* * *

An Idealist is so busy gazing at the moon that he usually walks right past the woman who would make him a perfect mental or spiritual mate, and doesn't fall in love until some little moron with a lot of initiative steps out and trips him up.

* * *

He is so busy looking at the stars that he doesn't know that he is treading all over the woman at his feet.

If you love an Idealist enough to SUFFER for it, marry him quickly before he gets the stardust out of his eyes and then brace yourself to take your medicine.

* * *

But never conclude that by marrying him you have got him TIED; because he can no more be "tied" than a moonbeam or a drop of dew.

* * *

If you have never been loved by an Idealist, you don't know what Heaven is. If you have never been married to one, you don't know what the Other Place is!

POCKET SCIENTIFIC EDUCATION

By Archibald Henderson

So rich is the body of knowledge, so far extended the scope of man's inquiry that a survey and outline appears something well nigh unattainable. In the past not a few works, often in many volumes, have been written purporting to cover, in its main branches, the field of human history. Within recent years this tendency to synthesize and summarize has steadily increased. On every hand we are confronted with outlines of every description, of national history, of world history, of art, literature, science, philosophy, religion, what not.

The most remarkable and successful of all these portmanteau works is "The Outline of History," by the novelist, futurist and journalist, H. G. Wells. Emboldened by the extraordinary success of that work, which appears in various forms but may be found between the covers of a single volume, Wells now comes forward with another extensive outline entitled "The Science of Life." With himself he has associated the distinguished scientist, Prof. Julian Huxley grandson of Wells's own teacher, Darwin's associate, Thomas Henry Huxley, and Wells's own son, George Philip Wells, of University College, London.

The new work, in two large volumes, is a fascinating readable study of life, viewed from the standpoint, not primarily of "history," so-called, but of science. To be sure, it is history—the study of the birth, evolution and present status of life-forms. Such a work, as the authors well say, reflects upon the conduct of our lives throughout, throws new light upon our moral judgments, suggests fresh methods of human co-operation, imposes novel conceptions of service, and opens new possibilities and freedom to us.

All of us are more or less familiar with the general outlines of world history. If we wish to refresh our minds on any particular phase of human history, there are reference books galore, ready at hand to supply us with all the data which we may need. This, however, is far from being the case, so far as science is concerned. Scientific knowledge is scattered in a thousand repositories, throughout countless technical journals and treatises, large and small, many of which cannot be intelligently or intelligibly read by the layman.

It is, therefore, highly desirable to have, ready to hand and in compact form, some general survey of the science of life. The new book attempts to describe life, of which man himself is a part, and in his own judgment, far the most important part; to tell simply what is surely known about it and to discuss what is suggested about it; and to draw just as much practicable wisdom as possible from the account.

"The Science of Life" is an arresting and valuable work, delightfully written yet accurate in statement and lucid in exposition. It is, properly considered, unique in its field. This richly informative work may be regarded as a sort of pocket science-of-life university course, biology for the masses.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Longing for adventure?

Sick of your job—sick of doing the same thing over and over? Sick of seeing the same people, living in the same four walls?

For you're sure that if you could get away life would be different. The nagging little fears, the stinging little frets, would drop away. You'd be happy again. And excited, and eager, as you haven't been for years. You'd be—Free.

Need a change? Of course you do. We all need changes. We all need to go to new places, see new faces, think new thoughts.

But just going-somewhere-else won't cure what ails you. Seeing-something-different won't solve your problems. Adventure isn't really what you need, though how often you cry, "If I could only Live—live life—instead of just existing!"

But actually, you don't really want to live life. Actually, you want to escape life. That's why you're restless and irritable and bored.

You want to escape the things that make life hard for you. Competition . . . criticism . . . contacts and conflicts . . . all these things make life hard for you. And you think that, if you went somewhere else, into new scenes, where you could meet new people, you would escape them.

But you couldn't.

For these things are a normal part of life—everywhere. Wherever you may go, wherever you may live, you will be forced to meet these conditions. If you can't meet and conquer them here you can't meet and conquer them anywhere.

Life . . . that's what ails you.

Self . . . that's what ails you.

And you're miserable and bored because you can't make a Going Partnership of Life and Self.

You wouldn't remedy that fact by going to the West Indies, to England, or Italy, or India, or Russia. You wouldn't remedy it by dropping housekeeping or letter filing and going on the stage—or writing columns for newspapers. Always Life will go with you. Always Self will go with you. And until you can adjust Self to Life, you'll never be happy anywhere.

Stop trying to run away from Life. Stop gazing, yearningly, toward the horizon for your Big Adventure. Your big adventure is here . . . Now. It is here, in the job you're doing. It is here, in the people you've always known.

Study that job. There's pride and punch in it if you'll look for it. Study those people. There's mystery and loveliness and a strange grave in them—if you'll recognize it.

If you can't find pride and punch in your daily round . . . if you can't recognize mystery and loveliness and force in the daily scene . . . then you'll never recognize them anywhere.

Find the adventure that exists here, now, all around you, and then . . . and only then . . . will you be fit for the adventure that exists beyond the horizon.

Isn't It So?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Consequences

In truth, if what you do
Begins and ends with you,
Your way is very good;
Words spoken, actions done,
If these brought pain to none,
If none misunderstood.

Then each man would be free
If all his acts could be
For but himself alone;
But none can ever know
How far the ripples go

And since time first began
Through all the ages' span,
Close-linked, life ever went;
Far off and long ago,
Down ways no man can know
Was shaped today's event.

Happy Baboon Family

But They Have Their Troubles.

WELL-GUARDED BABOON BABY

On the right the baboon father sits and, apparently, thinks. What he is thinking no man can know, if, indeed, he is able to think at all.

Some say that thought without language is impossible, because we cannot think except as we put our thoughts in words.

If he is thinking, perhaps the baboon father on the right is considering, in a vague and not thoroughly pleasant way, the very handsome, light-colored baboon gentleman on the left. He is no member of the family, but just dropped in. The supposition is that he is there to help protect the baby in case help should be needed.

Sometimes the father baboon bites or even kills the friendly young baboon that drops in "just to be sociable." Our lower emotions—jealousy, hatred, cruelty and brutality—are all reflected quite faithfully in the lower animals, from whom, evolutionists say, we inherited them.

By the way, it will interest some human mothers to know that this family of baboons in the London Zoological Garden has all sorts of advantages that many humans lack.

This baby baboon ought to be in the tropics. Yet, living in a climate not suited to its needs, its chances of survival are better than the chances of the average poor child in a big city.

The explanation is simple. A baboon baby is scientifically interesting and generally amusing. A human baby is a very commonplace affair.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Awakened by the shriek of high winds through the highways and a sad note from Meredith Nicholson, forlorn over the recent passing of his next door neighbor Kin Hubbard out in Indianapolis. Then to watch a theatrical rehearsal.

All the early afternoon working at my typewriter and later with my wife to a tea for Mrs. Sidney Carey, of Lexington, and saw there Evangeline Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Montague Love, Julia Hoyt and Louis Calhern among others. So walking through the dazzle of Broadway.

A light dinner and early to bed trying to read for the first time Poe's "The Fall of the House of Usher," but a crowd of roysterers popped in and routed us out, bringing their own piano player, and cutting high jinks until long after the midnight bells.

Cafes are offering bits of philosophy, sparkling epigrams and such on the outside cover of menus. A sort of soporific before turning inside to the price list for a little eye bulging.

* * *

* * *

W. C. Fields, waiting for a subway train, pushed a penny into a slot machine, jabbed the gadget and nothing happened. "Drat my gullibility!" he chirped and stepped into the arriving express. And now it's the big laugh provoking line in his show.

* * *

Perhaps the most dignified of the press agents is William J. Guard, who at 68 is Gatti-Casazza's man Friday at the Metropolitan. He bursts upon foyer crowds in white-lined Inverness cape, silk dicer at a jaunty angle and swinging a gold-knobbed cane—the last of Broadway's mid-Victorian flaneurs. He is the benevolent autocrat who spurning the wise crack calls the town's leading editors by first name and reads Voltaire for relaxation.

Few New York theaters have the vague quality called "atmosphere" so pronouncedly as The Palace. People think of waning vaudeville as appealing only to hoi-polloi. Yet persons of importance reserve seats for certain nights every week in the year. Sunday is big subscription night. Then one may always see such town figures as Russell Colt, Peter Arno, Aaron Reubens, Georges Carpentier, Sailing Baruch and Bugs Baer.

* * *

The New Amsterdam, too, has a clinging charm. Spacious but sombre, it has almost invariably housed a worthy attraction. Provincials have found it a good policy to buy seats there, not knowing or caring the precise name of the attraction.

* * *

Many new Thespic temples, dripping a rococco luxury and modern comfort, are strikingly cheerless and lacking individuality. Visiting them is akin to a bench in the waiting room of the Grand Central. Awkwardly stiff it often takes years for them to achieve that mellow intimacy that is 50 per cent a theater's charm. Most newer theaters have foyers that would not compare to a hall bedroom in a second class boarding house. An attractive feature for many theater goers is the strut through the lobby.

The theater standing out most vividly in my memory is People's over-the-Rhine in Cincinnati. Here in a beer-slinging, smoke fogged old auditorium those of us who imagined we were the adventurous Cellinis or Casanovas of that day went to see Rose Sidell's Blonde Belles and perhaps exchange winks with the gold toothed and hippy one second from the left end.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You may be one of those persons who was privileged to receive a good education.

That you attended college was in no way due to your own efforts for you had a father who paid all your bills.

The fact that you have a degree because your father's money permitted you to take advantage of this opportunity should not make you feel superior to those who did not have the necessary help to get through.

If you are this sort, instead of sneering at the one who had few educational advantages yet who is able to hold an important position, you would better study what enables him to hold it.

He certainly is entitled to more credit than you are.

But perhaps you doubt the ability of the man who has less educational equipment due to his lack of schooling.

Not infrequently you refer to him as not being rightfully in the position he now holds.

If your education has made you this sort of person you are a disgrace to your alma mater and to the fine lot of people who received higher instruction and came out kinder, more considerate and more appreciative of the self educated man.
